Anglo Airmen, Returning From Bitter Battle, Relate How Nazis Verge Upon Them

London, Dec. 15 (AP).—British and German war planes clashed in one of the heaviest air conflicts of the war, it was reported today, as the British raided Nazi seaplane bases and apparently attempted to finish off a crack German cruiser crippled by a torpedo.

The British said losses in the fighting—whether there was more than one combat was not clear—were four German and three British planes.

(Germany claimed 10 to 20 British planes were shot down with only one German plane forced down in a battle north of the Frisian Islands.)

Raiding on far-flung missions during last night and early today, the British fliers were reported by the air ministry to have bombed Nazi seaplanes at Sylt, island base off the southwest coast of Denmark, and the Islands of Borkum and Norderney, Island bases off the northeast coast of the Netherlands.

Rival fliers clashed when the British sought to return, and survivors related they saw a section of the German fleet which was reported to be escorting a damaged cruiser.

The royal air force fliers sighted a German battleship, a cruiser, some destroyers and a submarine, they said.

Desperate efforts were made by the Germans to keep secret the fact that the vessels were on the high seas. The British said six successive "waves" of German fighter planes went aloft to try to prevent the royal air force from getting home with the news.

Four of the German and three British planes were shot down, the air ministry said.

(The German high command said 10 of the 20 British planes had been shot down and one German plane "was forced to descend to the sea" in the battle north of the Frisian Islands. It said British planes failed in attacks on the Island of Sylt and the air base at Borkum)

The German warships combined their fire with that of the planes, and even the submarine took part in the gunning before diving for safety, the British fliers related.

Evidence of the blazing battle also came from Oslo, where Reuters news agency reported 60 explosions resembling gunfire were heard from the southwest.

German operations in the North Sea in this strength have not previously been reported.

Steaming Southward

The fact that the German warships in the North Sea were steaming southward when sighted led naval observers to believe that they were not seeking battle.

It was recalled in this connection that during the World War the British east coast was bombarded by small naval contingents. Such a raid on Lowestoft, and the British steps to prevent its recurrence, were factors leading up to the Battle of Jutland.

The absence of previous reports of any mass movement of the German navy in the present war was taken as an indication that the fleet was under orders similar to those of the World War—to stay in snug harbors and not expose itself to attack by a larger British force.

Many units of the British fleet recently have become engaged in sections far from the North Sea.

The admiralty announced that the cruisers Ajax and Achilles had been "strongly reinforced" in their watch for the Nazi battleship Graf Spee off Rio De La Plata when she might emerge from Montevideo harbor.

The battle cruiser Renown and the aircraft carrier Ark Royal were disclosed by authoritative sources to be near Capetown in search of another German pocket battleship, the Admiral Scheer; and other British patrols are churning the North Atlantic in the hunt for the third such raider, the Deutschland.

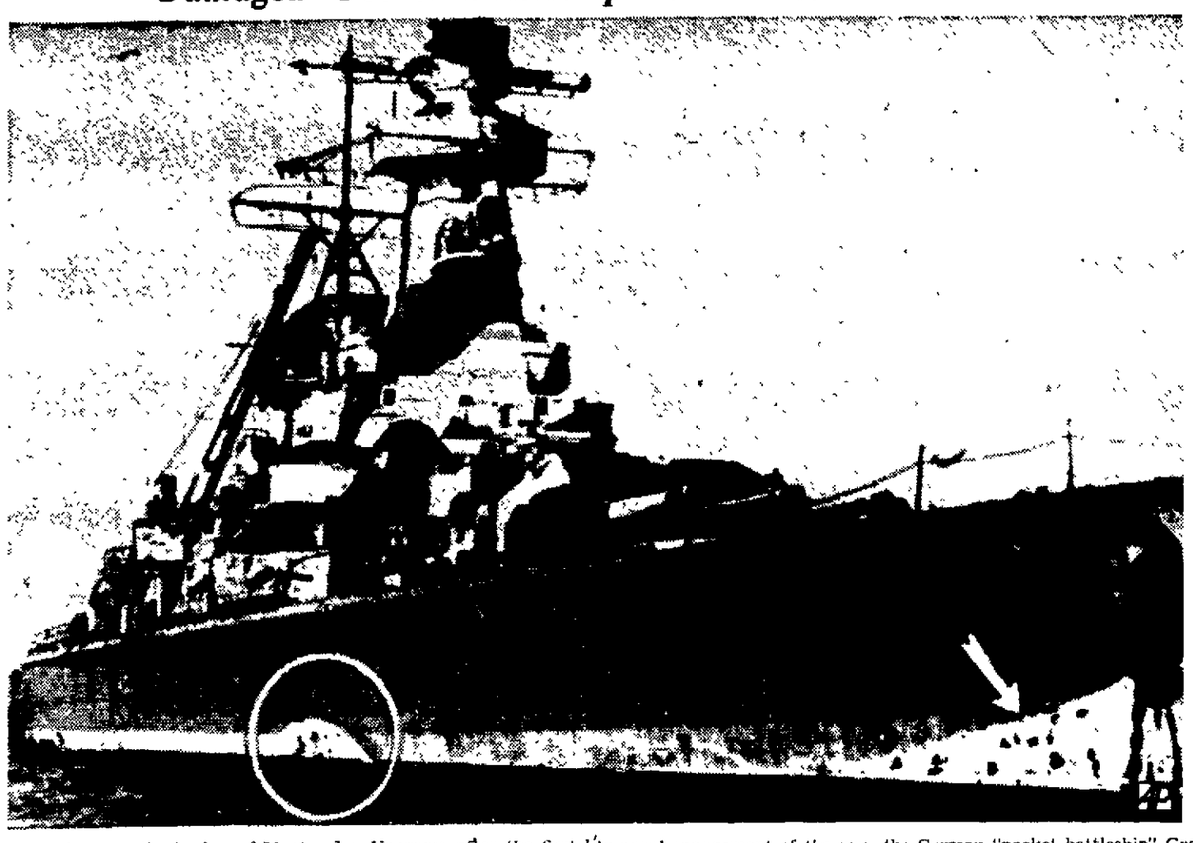
Damaged 'Pocket Battleship' in Montevideo Harbor



Putting into the harbor of Montevideo, Uruguay, after the first big naval engagement of the war, the German "pocket battleship" Graf Spee is shown bearing the scars (indicated by circle and arrow) of its encounter with the British cruisers Exeter, Ajax and Achilles. The German raider, which also suffered other damage, was reported to have 30 dead and twice as many wounded as a result of the hotly-waged sea battle. The Exeter was forced to fall behind in the dash after the Graf Spee, due to damage in the cannonading. (Picture by radio from Buenos Aires).

Invasion Does Not Keep Finland From Meeting War Debt

Hungarians Also Arrange to Hand Over Money to Treasury, but Amount Not in Full

Notes Arrive

Diplomatic Notes Reach State Department From Other Nations

Washington, Dec. 15 (AP).—Finland paid $234,693 on its war debt to the United States today despite its grim struggle against Russia.

Hjalmar Procope, Finnish minister, presented a check to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in an atmosphere charged with drama.

Morgenthau immediately told Procope that he would hold the money in a separate account in accordance with President Roosevelt's instructions, pending a recommendation to congress that "this money be used for the benefit of the Finnish people."

The semi-annual payment was on a debt aggregating $8,112,000.

Payment Indicated

Washington, Dec. 15 (AP).—A gruelling conflict with Russia failed to keep Finland from paying her war debt installment today, while a dozen other nations told the United States government that they could not raise the money.

Hjalmar J. Procope, the Finnish minister, obtained an appointment with Secretary Morgenthau at 11 a. m., E. S. T., to report that his country was making its semi-annual payment of $234,693 on a debt aggregating $8,142,000.

Finnish legation officials said that their country was "only keeping a contract it made with the United States."

Besides Finland, Hungary was the only country to hand over any cash on the war debt installments due at this time. She paid $9,828 of an installment totaling $52,260. The Hungarians, who owe the United States $2,412,000, have suggested that they be permitted to pay their original debt, without interest, in about 30 annual installments.

Scarcely Drop in Bucket

The Finnish and Hungarian payments were scarcely a drop in the bucket compared with those which debtors failed to meet. Today's installments from 13 nations aggregated $161,167,000 on a total debt of $12,865,707,000.

Diplomatically-phrased notes saying that nothing would be paid began arriving at the state department yesterday. Poland said that the German and Russian invasion of her territory was among the reasons she could not meet her bill.

Latvia, Lithuania and Yugoslavia expressed regret, and similar notes were expected today from Great Britain, France, Belgium, Estonia, Italy and Rumania.

The state department did not call on Czechoslovakia for her semi-annual installment because of "current governmental conditions" in that country. Officials explained that the partition of the country had made it difficult to know where a note should be addressed.

In presenting the December 15 bills, Secretary Hull reiterated this country's willingness to discuss any suggestions for a readjustment of the war debts. No new proposals were received, however.

There have been unofficial conversations between German and American authorities recently regarding a settlement of the Austrian debt, which the United States contends should be taken over by Germany. Nothing tangible has developed, and a payment on the obligations is not due until January 1.

Following are the countries, besides Finland and Hungary, whose installments fell due today. The amount of the installments and the total debts:

Belgium, installment of $4,642,453 due on debt of $457,552,000; Czechoslovakia, $1,682,812 on $165,788,000; Estonia, $463,850 on $21,321,000; France, $22,308,312 on $4,200,331,000; Great Britain, $122,670,765 on $5,574,430,000; Italy, $2,141,593 on $2,025,525,000; Latvia, $192,483 on $8,790,000; Lithuania, $121,466 on $7,870,000; Poland, $5,662,039 on $266,815,000; Rumania, $956,309 on $64,914,000; Yugoslavia, $38,315 on $61,817,000.

Official Low Is Six Degrees at City Hall

Although the official city thermometer at the city hall recorded a low of 6 degrees above zero, thermometers in other sections of the city for the first time this winter recorded as low as zero, and ranged from 2 to 6 degrees above that mark.

The Board of Public Works sanding crews worked until late resanding the hills and dangerous street intersections.

As the result of the work of sanding auto traffic was able to move at nearly normal speed, but owing to icy conditions all drivers were operating at low speeds.

The Hudson river and the Rondout creek are filled with floating ice which formed during the night, but navigation has not as yet been halted. Towing on the river is still in progress.

Taxes, Welfare And Relief Main Topics at Parley

Massachusetts Does Not Send Delegate; Stand Against Sales Tax Will Be Taken

New York, Dec. 15 (AP) — The problem of financing welfare and home relief costs and the increased cost of municipal government were discussed today at a joint conference of municipal leagues of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Connecticut.

Massachusetts, also invited, did not send a delegation.

Conrad J. Heiselman of Kingston, N. Y., president of the New York State Conference of Mayors, said the conference hoped to determine "how similar are the financial problems in the five states and how nearly we agree on the proper solution."

It was understood the conference would take a stand against a state-wide sales tax on the

Oklahoma's Senator Thomas Says U. S. Must Speed Up Its Defense

Boston, Dec. 15 (AP)—Speaking for a congressional committee which is nearing the end of a $14,000-mile tour of inspection of national defenses, Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) asserted today that America "must speed up its production for national defense" so as "to be ready to fight at the drop of a hat."

"This committee feels it has a solemn duty to notify the people of this country that we need a lot of stuff to be able to protect ourselves and that we better get busy and get it," Thomas said in an interview, as the committee prepared to inspect arsenals at Springfield and Watertown.

Commenting on modern "blitzkrieg," the senator said "in former times war was declared and six months later the real fighting began after much preparation. They do not do that anymore. There is no declaration of war. Like a fighter who must be ready to fight at the drop of a hat, we must be in condition at all times.

"At Springfield," he continues, "we are going to see if plans can't be made for a stimulation of the production of those semi-automatic (Garand) rifles. Do you know we traveled 10,000 miles, in and out of army posts, until we reached Fort Riley, Kas., before we could find one of the rifles?

"The expert marksman in the army who was supposed to show us how the new rifle worked at Fort Riley didn't know how to shoot it. The gun jammed and he didn't know how to fix it. If that's what's likely to happen if we have to defend ourselves, we better get busy right quick and do something about it."

Thomas said that the army was unable to show committee members a single gas mask during all its travels, and that the committee could find only four anti-aircraft guns during the entire tour.

F. D. R. Silent on Ickes

Hyde Park, N. Y., Dec. 15 (AP)—President Roosevelt declined today to comment upon Secretary Ickes' criticism of Paul V. McNutt as a possible candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Mr. Roosevelt was asked directly whether he, as a liberal, agreed with Ickes' views regarding McNutt. He replied quickly that of course there was nothing to be said on that. Under questioning, he then added his remarks about being too old to fall for the game of commenting on this or that candidate.

The President, talking with reporters shortly after he arrived from Washington, declared he was too old in political experience to comment on Ickes' statement that liberals would not support McNutt's candidacy.

Mr. Roosevelt said the game was to get people to comment on this man and that man and the third man and the fourth man. He said that by a gradual process of elimination reporters would have the whole story.

Santa to Arrive In City Tomorrow

St. Nick Will Come Here 2:30 P. M. Via Ferry; Parade to Be Held

Santa Claus will arrive in Kingston Saturday afternoon from Rhinebeck on the ferry reaching town at 2:30 o'clock and will be provided with a police escort which will take him on a tour of the city.

The parade will pass up Broadway to Albany avenue, to Clinton avenue and through Main street to Fair street. Up Fair street the parade will go to John street and over to Wall street where Santa Claus will be taken to North Front street. From there the parade will return to Clinton avenue and down to Main street, over Main street to Wall street and up to North Front street where the police escort will leave and Santa will alight for his tour of the business section.

Each afternon and evening until Christmas Santa Claus will be about the uptown business section on the streets and visiting the various stores where he will meet the children of the locality.

In accordance with a resolution passed by the Uptown Business Men's Association some time ago, the business places will remain open evenings, beginning Saturday night. All next week evening hours will be observed until 9:30 o'clock.

Wagner Has Plan

Washington, Dec. 15 (AP)—Senator Wagner (D., N. Y.) said today he would press for action in the 1940 Congress on his resolution to permit the immigration of 20,000 refugee children from Germany into the United States in the next two years. He said he would not object to any reasonable" amendment to take care of other refugees from the war in Europe.

Smith Says Labor Board Is Engaged In Extra-Legality

Member of National Group Says Activities Are Not Provided for in Act Passed by Congress

Washington, Dec. 15 (AP).—Edwin S. Smith, member of the National Labor Board, said today that the board had engaged in "extra-legal" activities of mediation and conciliation not provided for in the Wagner labor act.

He told the house committee investigating the board and the act that this work had been carried on as "what might be described as a hangover" from the NRA days when the old labor board engaged in mediation and conciliation services.

Immediately after the new board was created, he testified, many cases remained to be disposed of "as a matter of tradition," but recently, he said, that practice had "faded away" and the board now believes such activities should be curtailed.

Called as Witness

Smith was called as a committee witness while Edmund M. Toland, committee counsel, was placing in the records, documents which he said were intended to show that Smith was "interested" in settlement of a strike at the Berkshire Knitting Mills, Reading, Pa., although the board had not been involved officially.

In the course of this procedure Smith testified that he "thought" he had forwarded to a Boston department store a union handbill headed:

"Don't buy hosiery made by Berkshire."

The American Federation of Hosiery Workers was the organization involved in the strike, and the handbill was one of many documents which Smith identified as having been taken from his files.

Much of the matter was union literature, and Smith said that "some of it" was sent to Louis Kirstein, a vice president of Filene's store in Boston, where Smith was once employed as a personnel manager.

He said that he did not desire to be "captious or indefinite" but that he could not recall positively just which of the union papers were forwarded.

The handbill said:

"Ask your storekeeper or merchant where the hosiery he wishes to sell you, no matter what its name is, was made."

The handbill listed 45 brands of hose which it said were union made.

Toland began questioning Smith by asking his opinion of the right of the board to engage in conciliation and mediation activities. After explaining the carryover from NRA days, Smith said:

"They were carried on as a matter of tradition, and it gradually faded away. It is the intent of the board that those activities should be curtailed."

Allies Mass Naval Force to Keep Raider in Montevideo; Anglo Prisoners Deny Gas Usage

Montevideo, Dec. 15 (AP).—Guaranteed refuge to mend damage to their ship, the crew of the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee turned today to burial of their dead while the allies massed naval strength to keep the dreaded raider entrapped.

British diplomatic quarters indicated that the 10,000 ton British cruiser Cumberland had been added to the guard patrol off Montevideo and official Argentine sources at Buenos Aires said they "understood" that the 26,500-ton French battleship Dunkerque was steaming to join the cordon.

Combined with the British cruisers Ajax and Achilles, victors over the Admiral Graf Spee in Wednesday's running battle off the Uruguayan coast, these warships would confront the 10-000-ton pocket battleship with more than 50,000 tons of naval power in any gamble for freedom.

Against the 11-inch guns of the German vessel there would be the 13-inch pieces of the Dunkerque as well as the eight-inch batteries of the Cumberland and the six-inchers of the 7,030-ton Achilles and the 6,985-ton Ajax.

The Dunkerque alone is rated by naval experts as one of the five allied warships capable of dealing singly with the raider if she gave battle.

Choice Is Postponed

But the Admiral Graf Spee woill not be confronted for some time yet with the choice between internment for the duration of the war and making a break for the open sea. Action by the Uruguayan government postponed the choice.

Foreign Minister Alberto Guani said last night that, "in accordince with the Uruguayan neutrality law and international law," the Admiral Graf Spee could lie in Montevideo harbor until she could

Additional Help at Local Post Office to Be Put to Work Next Week

"We expect to handle the biggest Christmas mail in the history of the Kingston post office the coming week," observed Postmaster William R. Kraft today in discussing the local mail service. He said that it was planned to place additional help at work either Monday or Tuesday.

The incoming Christmas mail is growing very heavy, he said, and at the present time the uptown branch on Fair street is handling very heavy mail. He suggested that patrons who have automobiles would save time if they did their mail at the central post office.

The postmaster called attention to the fact that there was more available parking space for cars at the central office, and that there were more windows and larger lobby.

U. S. Exports Drop Sharply Last Month; British Blockade Effective

Washington, Dec. 15 (AP)—United States merchandise exports dropped sharply in November, the third month of the European war, after having risen unexpectedly the first two months of the conflict.

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins announced today that shipments of American goods to foreign countries totaled $287,000,000 last month, compared with $323,168,000 in October.

Effectiveness of the British blockade was demonstrated by the fact that Germany, which took $12,210,000 worth of American goods in November, 1938, got only $2,000 worth last month.

Only preliminary estimates of what happened in November trade are available so far, but Hopkins said that, on a commodity basis, the loss was caused by curtailed exports of cotton, grain and tobacco. On a geographical basis, he said, it resulted from smaller purchases by England, Canada and the Scandinavian countries. No figures are available yet on November imports.

Latin America, which the Roosevelt administration hopes will make up any trade losses in Europe, bought more last month, but not enough to overcome the declines elsewhere. Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Venezuela, Cuba, Mexico and the Netherland West Indies bought $52,749,000 in November, compared with $50,654,000 in October and an average of $35,825,000 a month in the first eight months of the year.

The United Kingdom, which recently indicated it would cut down on such items as American fruit while it buys American airplanes, dropped its total purchases here last month to $31,026,000, compared with $51,951,000 in October. France's $13,187,000 November purchases in the United States were about $800,000 more than in October.

Tanner Cites Statement by Stalin to Support Finns' Request

Helsinki, Dec. 15 (AP)—Finland's foreign minister, Vaino Tanner, today appealed in a radio broadcast to Russian Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff for a suspension of hostilities and resumption of negotiations on the basis of the principle of small nations' right of self determination.

Tanner, who took part in the long-drawn Kremlin negotiations which preceded the Russian invasion, recalled that Russia had lent support to this principle.

He recalled also how the Moscow government broke off diplomatic relations with Finland, refused mediation by the United States, rejected Sweden's efforts at conciliation and spurned the League of Nations' appeal for mediation of the dispute.

"However, the air is still open," Tanner said.

"When I recently visited the big agricultural exposition at Moscow," the Finnish foreign minister said, "I saw on the wall of one of the buildings a stirring sentence by your leader, Mr. Stalin:

"'The Soviet Union does not cover a single inch of the territory of other states but it will defend every inch of its own soil.'

"There is reason at this moment to save that slogan from sinking into oblivion.

Artillery Is Active

With the Finnish army on the Karelian front, Dec. 15 (AP)—The Soviet Russian army shattered the frosty silence of this eastern Karelian sector with artillery blasts today in a desperate effort to dislodge a few thousand grim but confident Finns from their advanced forest defenses.

This was the tenth day for such Red army attacks as the Russians continued their attempt to find a weak spot in the Finnish Mannerheim Line, just a few miles to the north. The war was 16 days old today.

(On the Finnish Arctic front, Russian troops invaded the nickel mining district and neared the town of Salmijarvi, which was burned by the Finns as they withdrew. Norwegians mined the frozen Pasvik (Pacific) river as a defense measure.

(Dispatches reaching Bergen, Norway, said two violent explosions were heard last night in Salmijarvi and it was presumed the Finns had dynamited rich nickel mines rather than have them fall into Russian hands.

(Officials of the International Nickel Company of Canada, principal owner of the mines, were understood to have left orders to blow up the property before they left the region.)

The Finnish army burrowed deeper under the snow on the northern side of the Taipale river but wasted no shells in anticipation of an expected enemy advance.

Fire Is Withheld

They withheld fire in the sub-Arctic twilight but were prepared to meet any move of the Soviet troops to cross the river. Already the Finns had stopped a dozen efforts to cross this barrier.

One strapping Finnish soldier said as the shells whistled overhead: "This couldn't frighten us from the pleasure of stopping another Russian drive."

Both officers and soldiers said the Russian batteries apparently were following no plan in their shelling but merely picked out a spot on the map to spray with shells for several hours.

For more than an hour Russian shells exploded in a clump of trees close to the river where not

Illinois Chemists Learn How to Make Beer Foam Last Longer

Urbana, Ill., Dec. 15 (AP)—The foam on beer is going to last longer because of a discovery announced today at the University of Illinois.

Two Illinois chemists, Dr George L. Clark and Sydney Ross, have found the secret of long life for a beer bubble. They have found how to use bubbles as a standard of quality and how brewers can tell by bubbles when the beer is "right."

Foam sells beer. Its stability is a function, as scientists say, of the brilliance or clearness of the drink. The froth is due to gas, placed in the beer either by bubbling through the liquid or by letting the beer fall through an atmosphere of gas.

But a long time worry of brewers has been a tendency of the gas to escape too rapidly, leaving the drink "flat." The chemical cause for this has been found at Illinois. It is something nobody had suspected, a connection between bubbles, proteins and metal.

Proteins Normal Parts

Proteins are normal parts of good beer. They are nutritional and they have flavor effect. They come mostly from grain. They give beer its clearness provided they are completely dissolved.

But if a protein "precipitates," that is, comes out of solution and turns into a fine bit of sediment, the gas gathers on the particles. This causes it to bubble out too fast.

There are only three or four of these "bad" proteins in beer. It is to get rid of them that beer is "aged" by standing in vats. The Illini chemists report that ultra-violet light instantly destroys these few "bad" proteins.

However, the misbehaving food factors are not the whole story of better beer bubbles. The slightest amount of dissolved copper or tin in the beer acts like a red flag to all proteins. They "go for" the metal particles, and precipitate from the beer to gather on the metal. Then they pick up gas and premature fizzling follows.

It is because of this that beer in cans is protected from the metal by a double coating. But the Illinois chemists discovered that beer picks up a slight amount of metal from the aging vats.

By getting rid of all the dissolved metal and the "bad" proteins, beer can be made to retain its bubbles for an additional half an hour or more.

Prize Plate

Omaha, Neb.—The dinner plate Miss Adeline Fencl, 22, won at a theatre turned out to be a prize in more ways than one.

A would-be purse snatcher selected Miss Fencl for a victim while she was homeward bound from the theatre, but she screamed and fought so lustily that the thief became confused and made off, not with her purse but with the dinner plate

College Student of 1850 Was Trained in Religion

College students between 1830 and 1850, usually pictured as swaggering, adolescent pranksters, were characterized by a preoccupation with religion, according to a study of the undergraduate of that period published by the Columbia Press.

Educational institutions used religion as a connecting link between all subjects, including chemistry, philosophy, and mathematics. Religious interest was fostered by the faculties. For example, one professor devoted his entire inaugural address to an avowal of his faith in God, and in the Bible as the literal expression of His will.

In a typical undergraduate essay, "On the Rhetoric of the Bible," a student declared that the word of God was the best model of literary composition. It is impossible to overestimate the importance of such religious thinking in education.

But there were frivolous moments, it is pointed out. At one meeting of a student literary society the subject was whether or not old bachelors ought to be taxed for the support of old maids, decided by young bachelors in the affirmative.

During the entire period between 1830 and 1850 there was an epidemic of interest in college education. The chief symptom was the quantitative increase of such institutions, there having been in the neighborhood of 80 colleges founded. In spite of the financial panic of 1837 and the ensuing depression more than two score colleges were begun in the 1840s, 32 of them substantial enough to survive to the present day.

Generally speaking, this flurry of establishment was the result of a marriage between the then universal American respect for education and denominational enthusiasm among the churches. The colleges were designed primarily as institutions to train men for the ministry or for God-fearing professional careers, and each sect strove to outdo all others in providing its own future leaders. Amherst, according to its Greek professor, had been "born of the prayers, and baptized with the tears, of holy men" early in the century, and most of its later rivals were similarly conceived.

Much of the interest in American literature during the period was expressed in earnest or arrogant denials of its nonexistence.

Meeting at Sea Is Cause of Comment In Mexican Press

Mexico City, Dec. 15 (AP) — A meeting on the high seas between a United States destroyer and a Mexican tanker was widely published today in the Mexican press.

In one newspaper it received more space and prominence than the German-British naval battle off Uruguay and was printed under the large red headline, "Yankee Intervention in Mexico."

The government, however, regarded the incident as the proper act of an American warship on neutrality patrol. It said the destroyer merely had signalled the tanker Pelicano to identify herself outside Mexican territorial waters and then immediately had permitted her to proceed.

United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels, meanwhile, was reported to have discussed with Foreign Minister Eduardo Hay the complaint of a Mexican naval officer at Vera Cruz that a United States destroyer had entered territorial waters in another incident.

Daniels was understood to have explained that all American war vessels were ordered to stay outside Mexico's waters unless specifically authorized by Mexico to enter and that either the Mexican or American naval officer had miscalculated the warship's position.

Saugerties Man Aids in New Idea

Will Adams, a former Saugerties resident, is the co-author of an idea known as the talking book which is now ready for the market. Adams and John Drake, another advertising man, conceived a scheme for dramatizing books with sound effects.

Music and voice technique used in the movies and radio and as the reader turns the pages, the story speaks and the illustration comes to life.

The first of a series of these new talking books recently made its appearance in book and phonograph record stores throughout the country. It is a juveline subject entitled "Mother Goose Parade." The verse is by Carolyn Adams and illustrations by Charlotte Steiner and songs by Alice Remsen on the blue network each Sunday.

The production was directed by Adams and Drake. The sound track recording can be played on any standard phonograph.

Condemns Housing

New York, Dec. 15 (AP).—Federal public housing is unsound, says the New York State League of Sevings and Loan Associations, and further projects should be started only on authority of voters in the respective communities. The league adopted a resolution yesterday opposing expansion of the program and suggesting projects in the future be voted on by communities which must "shoulder the tax burden resulting from tax exemptions and other subsidies and privileges created for public housing projects." At the same time, the league voted to enlist all Savings and Loan Associations in the league in a drive for donations for a "state-wide fight for the lowering of costs of both local and state government" because income taxes and various levies on business were driving industry from the state.

GUARDIANS OF CIVILIZATION

When Finns ask for help, they need it. There is no more independent and self-respecting nation in the world. And if there is any more civilized nation, where is it? They deserve all the help anybody can give them.

They have not given any false alarms. They have not howled before they were hurt. They are not howling now. They are completely mobilized and fighting like heroes. But they are realistic and they have a sense of justice. Stating their own wrongs and needs as they might state a neighbor's in similar circumstances, they say to the world:

"The people of Finland are fighting for their independence, their freedom. We are defending our fatherland, our democracy, our homes and all that civilized people hold sacred. So far we are fighting alone against the invader. We have given proof of our determination. We intend to continue fighting. But we believe that the civilized world, which has so freely given its sympathy, will not leave us to fight alone against so numerous and powerful an enemy.

"Our position as the advance guard of western civilization gives us the right to expect active help from other civilized nations."

True and stirring words, every one of them. And the Finnish government and people might have said still more. They might have said, with truth, that if they are overwhelmed by the oriental barbarism of Russia, with Nazi Germany helping the Communist invader or at least not hindering, they will not sink alone. The freedom of western Europe may go down with them.

With governors, mayors and religious leaders throughout the nation giving their support to former President Herbert Hoover's proposal to raise funds for stricken Finland's non-combatants, the campaign should be very successful. Sunday, November 17, has been named Finland Day, when money will be accepted for use by the Red Cross Society to aid the war victims.

LUNCH CLUBS TO WIN WAR

"In this strangest of wars we must see that public morale is maintained," says Prime Minister Chamberlain, writing to a national defense organization. So he welcomes the "wartime luncheons" proposed, at which members of the government and other leading people will speak.

The idea seems to be a good deal like our own business men's lunch clubs, often addressed by speakers on public events. That is a natural and friendly development. But the special interest that it has for outsiders lies in the curious situation revealed.

Apparently there has been so little going on, in "this strangest of wars," that people are getting bored and need something new to occupy their attention. It's a test of patience, and there must be tiffin and talk to keep up interest in it.

The situation, however, may change without notice. Lately there are hints of big events about to break.

THE TOURIST INDUSTRY

Seven counties comprising upstate regions west of the Hudson have combined in an effort to attract tourists to these regions and also for the further development of the natural attractions in these areas.

The field of great usefulness open to this [illegible] and all other groups desirous of [illegible]ting this region should be apparent to [illegible]. Advertising of these regions in the past has been directed to certain sections without reference to the manifold attractions in the entire region. With the historical, recreational, commercial, cultural and scenic advantages of the entire section stressed, there would be a greater amount of tourist trade in this section. The way to draw people to a region is to let the world know about it as a whole, its accessibility, its widely varying attractions and to impress the fact that nowhere in America is there such a variety of scenery. Once the tide sets this way it will be up to the individual counties to get their share by letting the visitors know what they have to offer. In doing this it will not be necessary to detract from the advantages in other sections. A combined boost for the whole region is the thing that is needed.

The Empire State Travel Association in seeking stimulation of the state's economic life by greater capitalization of the tourist industry through state advertising issues the following statement:

"Today nearly ten per cent of the national income is spent on travel. This means that gigantic industry is available to every community of this state, if the state but takes advantage of its opportunity.

"War abroad will keep at home more than 400,000 Americans who annually spent $250,000,000 in Europe. It will bring Latin Americans, who usually vacation abroad for visits to this country. It will mean that 1940 will be in truth a See America Year.

"State advertising can bring the cash tourist crop into every community of this state. And the added yield from the gasoline tax on out-of-state cars alone will more than pay for the state advertising cost. That was proved this year, when added state advertising resulted in an increase for nearly $3,000,000 in gas tax revenue for the three summer months over the same period a year ago. The sums spent in advertising were an investment, not only self liquidating, but a money maker for the state itself, and a stimulus to business generally."

SAVING LIFE IN PNEUMONIA

When a child or adult has been lost in the woods during cold or damp weather it is not starvation that is most feared by the family but exposure. Why is exposure so often a forerunner of pneumonia?

The forces within us which protect us from pneumonia need heat in order to fight off pneumonia organisms, so cold and dampness make the body less able to prevent this infection.

In addition to the cold and dampness, the lost child or adult becomes doubly exhausted by his wanderings and by his anxiety. Exhaustion likewise prevents the body forces from putting up a strong fight against pneumonia.

If during cold or damp weather or during periods of hard mental and physical work you (or yours) are struck down suddenly with a chill, head cold, and a slight cough, it would be well to think about pneumonia, not because you are likely developing an attack of pneumonia but because chill, cough, and slight rise in temperature should put you to bed anyway and thus you are doing the best possible thing to prevent an attack of pneumonia or to fight it successfully, should it prove to be pneumonia.

The common symptoms of pneumonia are this sudden chill up and down the back or over entire body, rise in temperature, pain or tightness in the chest, cough which brings up a clear mucous, then red, and finally rusty mucous or sputum.

"Once infection starts in, despite the application of heat and rest in bed, the organisms greatly multiply, the lungs become congested, and fever and prostration follow. The doctor immediately sends a sample of the patient's sputum to a laboratory where the type of pneumonia becomes known, and, knowing the type, he administers the serum which counteracts this particular type of pneumonia. The patient's temperature drops and becomes normal within 36 hours, and with a proper supply of oxygen, careful nursing, and a week's rest, the cure is effected."

The lesson regarding pneumonia is that getting to bed early to save the strength of the heart and having the physician called promptly so that the kind of pneumonia can be discovered early and thus right serum given, is the best protection against a fatal outcome.

Sulphapyridine, the new drug, has been shown to be most effective in preventing the development of pneumonia organisms.

The Common Cold

The common cold is the disease which is most often neglected and which may lead to most serious complications. Paris, (AP).—The things that Joe Poilu can't say when he writes home from the lines are numerous. In fact, if his pen slips too much the wife or sweetheart he left behind may not get his letter at all.

In such cases the military authorities simply open the envelope, take out the original message and replace it with a succinct note which reads, "Madame, your husband (father or brother) has too long a tongue."

Here are the subjects which are strictly out of place in letters home from the trenches:

Information on location, movements, and strength of troops. Nature and importance of defence measures. Names of commanding officers. Geographical information regarding operations already executed.

Sion, Switzerland, (AP).—Mountaineers on the Swiss slopes of the Alps near the Matterhorn are taking care of dozens of winged "soldiers" of the European war.

First to arrive at the high mountain ridges barring their way to the south were ten weary and bedraggled carrier pigeons with little containers strapped to their legs marked "Varsovia? Polonia Fr. 139." Th messages they carried were sent to Swiss army headquarters. Officers said the pigeons probably found the posts to which their messages were destined had been deserted or destroyed. Other birds have reached the Alps from the western front. All apparently headed south with migratory birds when, for some reason or another they could not reach their bases. A few were injured by rifle fire.

WORKERS BETTER OFF THAN IN 1929

Real Wages Highest in the History of Nation

Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 15—Factory workers in this and practically every other industrial town who have jobs are better off today than they ever have been. Their wages, measured by the amount of food and clothing their pay envelopes will buy, are the highest in history. The working generation of 1939 gets far more for its dollar than that of 1929. Only disadvantages facing the employe of today is the fact that a fourth of his income must go for taxes, relief, and graft.

In remembering the late 1920's as a period of unbridled prosperity, we often forget that many changes have taken place which benefit the wage earner and salary worker of 1939. Living costs have plummeted while wage rates have skyrocketed. The cost of living, as estimated by authorities today, is off a seventh from 1929. This means that a man who is receiving the same wage today that he was 10 years ago, actually has been given a 16 per cent pay boost. The worker who today gets 14 per cent less in his pay envelope than in 1929 can buy just as much as he could then.

Food and Clothing Cheaper

Major savings in the average family's living costs today are in the weekly market basket. Food now is almost a third cheaper than in 1929. There is not much saving in rent or the cost of building. If you want to build a house today it will cost you about as much as it did 10 years ago. You can not rent a desirable apartment or single house much cheaper than you could then. Clothing, however, costs a lot less. Today $75 will buy as many suits ,dresses, hats, and shoes as $100 bought 10 years ago.

Taxes are a different story. Back in 1929, 15 cents was sucked out of every wage worker's dollar by local, state, and federal government costs. Today, taxes take 25 cents out of a working man's dollar. Moreover, if taxes were high enough to pay all our public bills as we go along, instead of borrowing part of the money, government costs would take even a greater portion of the worker's income. The average wage earner does not realize this because most taxes he pays are hidden. It would be committing political hari-kari to let consumers know how much cheaper their food, clothing and rents would be if public spending had been kept within bounds in the past 10 years.

Taxes Offset Efficiency

That living expenses would be less today is not opinion, but fact. A comparison of 1939's raw material costs and retail prices with those of 1929 bears this out. Raw material prices are now 30 per cent lower than in 1929; but retail prices are only 20 per cent lower. Many raw commodities are actually selling today for less than it costs to produce them. The reason that a housewife has to pay as much as she does for a shirt or a loaf of bread is not because the cotton planter or the wheat farmer is being paid too much. In fact, the planters and farmers are getting little.

It is due to two reasons: (1) The workers who made the shirts and the bread have had a justifiable increase in pay; and (2) because the shirt manufacturer's and baker's taxes are about twice as big as they were in 1929. Hence, the savings in raw material costs through lower prices and in labor cost through increased efficiency of new machines have almost been eaten up by taxes. If government expenses had not gotten out of hand, these savings would have been passed on to consumers through lower prices. They, in turn, would be able to buy more goods of other kinds, thus providing new jobs for the workers displaced by the labor-saving stitching and baking machines.

Wage Rates Rising Steadily

While living expenses have been held down during the 1933-39 business recovery (they are not much higher now than they were five years ago), factory wage rates have been rapidly marked up. Since 1933, there has been an almost unbroken rise in hourly pay. Today the average factory wage of more than 70 cents per hour is the highest in the history of the country. At the same time, the work-week has been trimmed down drastically so that the factory worker's average weekly income may not be any higher today than it was in 1929—before the savings in living costs are figured in.

As to the immediate trend of living costs and wages, I see no important changes. Probably early 1940 will see some modest advance in food and clothing prices, but there will be no sharp mark-ups. Careful shoppers will be able to save a little money on post-Christmas bargain sales. Unless, however, goods are really marked down, I see little reason for housewives to stock up heavily in clearance sales this January. Meanwhile, wage rates will continue to rise gradually.

Taxation Stifling Jobs

So, Yuletide of 1939 rolls around with the lot of the American jobholder making a striking comparison with that of labor in other lands. No rational food, no soaring living costs, no cold and dark homes. Only point of similarity is the huge cut taxes take out of the weekly pay envelope. When I say that job-holders are better off in America today than anywhere else in the world I have not forgotten there are millions out of work. Faulty education and unwise taxation are behind this unemployment. Not until politics are rooted out of our schools and graft voted out of our local, state, and federal governments, can we ever hope to solve unemployment and end the threat to our liberty.

San Diego Mission

Probably the most magnificent of all the old missions is San Juan Capistrano at San Diego, established by Father Serro in 1776. Four of the ancient bronze bells, now covered with the soft green color of age, remain on the structure today. One of the first missions founded in California was the San Diego Mission and it was followed by the one at Monterey. The San Diego mission still stands and its bells ring on special occasions. The bronze bells in this mission were brought from Spain, as were many of the others. Later, the bells were made in New England and shipped around the Horn.

Angle of Purity in Politics, Prompted by Frey's Stand on Labor Union Money, to Come Before Congress

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Dec. 15.—Financial contributions by labor unions to political parties has now been condemned by the American Federation of Labor, speaking through John Frey, vice president. His testimony before the Smith special investigating committee of the House of Representatives brings to light an angle of purity in politics and government which is bound to be made the subject of legislative consideration at the forthcoming session of Congress.

The last session dealt, through the enactment of the Hatch law, with the misuse of public power by office holders in their relation to party politics, and public opinion forced the passage of the new law, even though the politicians themselves really opposed it.

Today the question of amending the federal corrupt practices act has come before the country as a paramount issue, because corporations have long been forbidden to make political party contributions, whereas organizations such as labor unions and so-called labor leagues have not been prohibited from doing so.

Mr. Frey, of the A. F. of L., pointed to a situation in the last presidential campaign when a loan of about $600,000 was made to the Democratic party by the C. I. O., of which John L. Lewis is the president. The A. F. of L. spokesman also called attention to the fact that Mr. Lewis spoke of $800,000 now being collected by an assessment among C. I. O. unions to be used for political purposes in the 1940 campaign.

"Nothing could be more destructive," testified Mr. Frey, "to organized labor than to have national labor organizations collect money for partisan politics."

The A. F. of L., of course, has never failed to notify its members to support Democrats or Republicans for Congress or other national offices, but has never gone into party welfare in a big way with huge financial contributions collected from its members or taken from its treasury.

Mr. Frey called public attention to the way in which John L. Lewis reproached President Roosevelt a year after the 1936 campaign because the latter had not taken sides at that time in behalf of the C. I. O. in a major strike, declaring that it ill became those who had supped at labor's table to be issuing comments critical of such labor unions.

The other day, David Dubinsky, another labor leader who was active in the C. I. O. in the last presidential campaign, was recorded before the Smith committee as having complained to a labor board representative about an adverse decision with the comment: "That's not what we paid our money for."

Mr. Dubinsky has since explained that he was referring to some legal expenses incurred by his union to develop a plan of certification of labor union membership, which the board by its decision had upset, though Dr. W. M. Leiserson, member of the labor board, drew the inference that the Dubinsky comment may possibly have had relation to political contributions.

The impression created when the first scandals about heavy corporate contributions to political campaigns were disclosed about 30 years ago was that these payments put public officers under obligation when elected. If a corporation executive, who, under the law, may nowadays contribute his personal funds to a campaign, were publicly to declare that he was not getting from a member of Congress what he believed would be to his benefit by supporting a particular candidate with his funds, the people would be shocked at such a contention. Yet the collecting of hundreds of thousands of dollars of funds from workers out of their weekly pay checks to carry on a political campaign has for some reason until lately been ignored. The revelations before the Smith committee have brought the subject into prominence once more, and this time demands are likely to be made in Congress either forbidding collections of dues for political purposes from labor unions, or else insisting that a public accounting of all labor union funds be required in much the same way that corporations must file records of their activities before the securities and exchange commission and other governmental agencies.

Halter Snap Figures In Death of 5 Persons

Los Angeles, Dec. 15 (AP)—Evidence that five persons originally believed killed in an automobile plunge 1,000 feet into a canyon might have been killed instead with a heavy halter snap was expected to be presented at an inquest today.

Laurel H. Crawford is held on suspicion of murdering his wife, three children and Ralph Barnett, 61, roomer in their home, Monday to collect $40,500 insurance. Crawford, vehemently denying guilt, insists he lost control of the sedan and leaped to safety as it left the road.

Dr. Frank R. Webb, county autopsy surgeon, reported all five victims had identical head injuries. He said each probably died from concussion and that only Mrs. Crawford had other injuries which might have been fatal.

Sheriff's Deputies Paul Mahoney and Garner Brown found a halter snap, bloodstained, at the scene. They said it could have caused the head injuries.

Had Varied Career In Many Countries

Hermit Now Lives Peaceful Life in England.

LONDON.—Charlie Turpin, who was once a cowboy in Canada and Texas, and soldier in the World war, now is a hermit.

Eight years ago he established himself in his present home, an earthen cage, near the banks of the River Story at Harlow, Essex.

It took him an hour and a half to dig his home. He furnished it with a bunk and a stove. For ornaments he has scores of curios collected in all parts of the world.

He is known locally as Charlie the Hermit.

Nell, his dog, helps him by catching wild fowl. A small pension from a war wound is his income.

This 65-year-old ex-public schoolboy began his travels as a sailor in the royal navy. Then he went to America and became a cowboy.

Once in Alberta he was rounding up a herd of stampeding cattle when his mustang reared and threw him. His kneecap was smashed. But there were no doctors and so the knee did not heal perfectly.

Turpin was one of the first recruits of the Canadian expeditionary forces in 1914. He was severely wounded, gassed and shell-shocked.

After the war he went to Australia, where he worked in the mines for two years.

Then he stowed away on a ship and came to England—to be a hermit.

North Pacific Charted For Commerce or War

SEATTLE.—The floor of the North Pacific ocean, with its deep valleys and 10,000 crags, is the site of unprecedented activity by the United States coast and geodetic survey. Rear Adm. L. O. Colbert, survey director, explained here that charts of the Alaskan coastline held significance both in war and peace.

"Few persons realize the strategic importance of the Aleutian islands," Admiral Colbert declared. "They extend almost a thousand miles to the westward of Alaska, ending only six hundred miles from Japan."

Since the navy has increased its operations in Alaska, he said, the survey has sent five vessels to Seattle. A sixth vessel, the $1,250,000 survey ship Explorer, will be added to the fleet next spring upon completion here.

It will be seven more years, the admiral said, before the Aleutian islands are charted. An undersea mountain more than 10,000 feet high was discovered in that area within recent weeks. The same survey showed a valley 24 miles long extending parallel to the islands.

"In the Bering sea there are 750,000 miles of unsurveyed area," the survey director stated. "South of the Aleutian islands an ocean domain the size of the State of Washington waits to be charted."

The main task of the survey, he said, was to protect waterborne commerce from undersea hazards—in war or peace.

War Toughens Man's Job Of Protecting Horses

LONDON.—Wars and crises have greatly increased the work of a Briton who has devoted 42 years to protection of animals in Italy. Since 1937 he has directed his work from a London nursing home. Commendatore Leonard Hawksley receives a large subsidy from the Italian government. Italy is short of horses due to the wars in Ethiopia and Spain. Wherever possible they are used instead of motor trucks, because gasoline is 90 cents a gallon. Horses are being worked to death, he says, and others are being starved through lack of fodder.

Germans Need Permits To Buy Textile Articles

BERLIN.—Permits must be obtained in Germany to purchase any textile goods, down to handkerchiefs and dusters. One person is entitled to own two dresses or suits, two pairs of shoes and six handkerchiefs. One piece or tube of shaving soap may be bought every 2½ months. All toilet soap has been requisitioned for use in hospitals, and a special "war soap" is to be sold.

Fisherman's Catch

PORTLAND, MAINE.—Two sea gulls were hooked securely by their bills when they sought to filch the bait from barbed trawls on Eugene C. Lunt's fishing boat at Portland, Maine.

Millions of Children Have Vision Defects

PHILADELPHIA.—Ten million American school children have faulty vision that needs corrective treatment, according to Harry L. List, secretary of the public health bureau of the American Optometric association.

"Hundreds of tests and examinations—especially to those from the lower income brackets—have disclosed a great number of vision ailments which will develop into serious problems unless they are immediately corrected," he said.

ation enthusiast who had crashed less than a month before his intended marriage. The house was too rambling and a trifle too isolated for the average purchaser, so Sue had taken it for granted it had not been sold.

"It's a heavenly site for it, Bob," she said as they entered the curving drive. "All these magnificent trees, and so high up . . . I believe you'll be able to see the river on clear days!"

"That's one of the reasons I bought it," he said simply. "I remember where I saw you first. I knew you'd want a glimpse of your beloved river. Wait till I unlock the door. There! Will you walk into your parlor, Sue? Or your hall, anyway?"

He touched a button by the door and the square entrance with its fireplace and its beautiful staircase, bloomed with soft light.

"It's furnished!" she gasped. "I didn't know Ted Wilmington had it all ready."

"Pretty nearly. There were gaps here and there which I've been filling in. Not that I know anything about such things, but there's a friend of mine in Kansas City who does. She's been picking up odds and ends for me all winter. Like it, Sue? Here's the living-room. Runs the length of the house, d'you see? These long windows open onto a formal garden—that is, it's going to be formal when it's finished. And you can see the river from here, too!"

Hardly giving her time to take in the lovely room with its rugs like faintly gleaming jewels, its white marble fireplace, its deep, comfortable couches and big armchairs, he put a hand beneath her elbow and urged her along.

"Across the hall, you see, is a reception room. That's so you won't have to take strangers, or bores into the intimacy of the other one. And here's the dining-room. Big enough to have all our friends to dine, eh? You love flowers so, Sue, that I got the architect to design this alcove affair. It can be shut off to be kept at the proper temperature or it can stand open—look!"

'It's Perfect!'

HE FLUNG open the wide doors with a flourish and the girl gasped. The glassed-in nook was already sweet with blossoming plants and even as she looked, a tiny fountain rose under the pressure of his finger on a concealed button.

"Pretty keen, Sue? About what you'd have fixed yourself, if you'd been consulted?"

"Bob, I never, never could have thought of such a lovely thing! It's perfect! It's a real winter garden, isn't it, with gravel paths and flowers growing right out of the ground, and all! It's magic, Bob!"

"The flowers are frauds in a way," he chuckled. "I mean—growing so casually in the ground. They're still in their pots, you know. Maybe they'd do all right if they were out, but I was taking no chances on having them at their best when you first saw them. Want to inspect the culinary regions?"

Her heart was beating a little fast as she nodded. It touched her, his careful thought for what would or would not please her. Who but Bob would remember how she loved the river, how great a part in her life flowers had always played?

"Oh, why can't I just let myself go and marry him?" she asked herself despairingly. "I'll be twenty-five next month, and I like him—I come nearer loving him than any man I've known in my life. I can't go on much longer with Allen and Patsy. I want a home—and this is such a beautiful one! I want children. Bob's everything that most girls dream of. Why can't I get all thrilled and excited about him? Want him to kiss me—hold me in his arms? Maybe I'm not capable of feeling like that toward any man. Maybe I'm one of these fundamentally cold women you read about. If I could be sure of that—if I didn't think there'd be danger of meeting the right man after I was married, I'd take a chance!"

"What are you thinking, standing there in the middle of the kitchen, and not hearing one word I say?" he demanded. "Is anything wrong, Sue? I mean—would you like any changes made? Make 'em in a minute, you know. You've only to say the word!"

"It's perfect!" she repeated. "It's only—I was only—wishing I cared enough for you to—to share it with you, Bob, dear!"

His face fell like a grieved child's. "And don't you, Sue? Don't you, my darling? I thought—it seems perfectly incomprehensible to me that I can love you so—so utterly, and you not feel as I do. Perhaps you're not the passionately loving kind, Sue. Perhaps you love me now as much as you can. You said—you did say you'd missed me this week!" He sounded very young and touching as he spoke; very far removed from the arrogant man who had lightheartedly proposed to her the first time they had danced together.

She looked at him with troubled eyes.

Mistress—Did you mail those two letters I gave you, Nora?

Nora—Yes'm at the postoffice. But I noticed that you'd put the two-cent stamp on the foreign letter and the five-cent stamp on the city one.

Mistress—Oh, dear, what a blunder!

Nora—But I fixed it all right, ma'am. I just changed the addresses on the envelopes.

Friend—You didn't carry out your plans to elope?

Sweet Young Thing—No; I found Daddy was planning to move and I didn't know where we'd find him when we got back.

Some girls believe that love shortens life, so they try to become angels overnight.

Some people can learn to spell. A lot of them can't.

The schools are not entirely to blame for the poor spellers.

Back in the days when a child wasn't taught anything but the spelling book along with some make-shift reading and a bit of ciphering there were still a lot of them that didn't learn to spell.

Stout Lady (to small boy)—Please tell me whether I can get to the park through this gate.

Small Boy—I guess so. A load of hay just went through.

It is important that rich men shall know how workers live, and that workers shall know how rich men work.

He had been to a stag dinner, and his wife wanted to hear all about it when he got home.

He—Well, one rather odd thing occurred. Jim Blankton got up and left the table because some fellow told a risque story he did not approve of.

Wife—How noble of Mr. Blankton! And what was the story, John.

According to "The Progressive Grocer," the American people use twenty-five pounds of soap per person each year, not mentioning soft soap.

Detective—And do you know what we policemen mean by a perfect crime?

Sweet Young Thing—Sure! If you stole a kiss, that would be perfect!

Unless a man has been kicked around a little, you you really can't depend upon him to amount to anything.

Plumber (arriving late to stop water leak in cellar)—How did you manage?

Housewife—Right well. While waiting for you, I taught both my sons to swim.

Patrolman (to drunk at 3 a. m.) Just where do you think you're going this time of night?

Drunk (staggering home)—To a lecture.

If people weren't too lazy to want to do hard work, probably few labor-saving devices ever would have been invented. The desire to avoid hard work and still get it done is responsible for much of the progress of the world.

Old-Fashioned

This old world has not grown decadent,
So why spend useless hours in remorse?
There's just as much horse-sense as ever,
Even though its all possessed by the horse!

Wifey—John, what punishment should be meted out to a man who proposed to a woman and then refuses to marry her?

Hubby—He should be compelled to marry her.

MARLBOROUGH

Marlborough, Dec. 14—On Monday evening in the auditorium of the Central School, the December meeting of the Marlborough Parent-Teacher Association was held. Business was put off until the next meeting in January and the regular Christmas party was held. A short two-act play was given by members of the sixth grade and group of girls rendered Christmas carols. Miss Dawes rendered musical numbers and there were several musical numbers given by several students under the direction of Paul Maroney, music supervisor. Following the entertainment, Santa Claus, who was represented by Cluett Schantz, made his appearance, and presented each child present with a candy cane and orange.

The annual Christmas party for the Marlborough Presbyterian Sunday School will be held on Thursday evening, December 21, at 7:30. There will be a Christmas tree music and gifts for all.

On Saturday afternoon, December 23, in St. Mary's Hall, the annual Christmas party for the members of St. Mary's Sunday School will be held.

A new club for the young men of the village of Marlborough has been organized. The organization, which has 15 members so far is called the Young Men's Club of Marlborough. Its officers are Al. Sparaco, president; John Stallone, vice president; John DiSantis, sergeant at arms; Sam Capadona, treasurer. The club meets weekly, on Monday at the home of the president. The purpose of the club is to provide for the younger generation of the town a place for good clean sport. As soon as a club house can be provided the organization hopes substantially to increase its membership. A move is now under way to raise money for providing a club house.

Miss Elizabeth Staples was confined to her home by illness last week.

Mrs. Jennie Froemel attended a bridge party in Highland on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ryan, Mrs. Caroline Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kroan spent last weekend in Buffalo where they visited Miss Caroline Rygan, student at Houghton College.

Wild Sextet From Law-cia Howls for Local Kiwanians

A sextet composed of leading law enforcement officials of the county was the big feature at Thursday's noonday luncheon meeting of Kiwanis.

Representing the sheriff's office were Sheriff A. F. Molyneaux and Deputy Clayton W. Vredenburg, while the state police force was represented by Sergeants James J. Cunningham and E. J. Hulse, Corporal Norman Baker and Trooper Arthur Reilly. With Sheriff Molyneaux conducting and Sergeant Cunningham handling the more difficult solo parts the sextet gave a rendition of "My Wild Irish Rose." Later unavailing attempts were made to induce Sergeant Cunningham to appear in a solo number.

President E. M. Huben introduced the visiting officers to the Kiwanians and said that they were present as guests that day as a gesture of appreciation of the fine work done by the state police and deputies of the sheriff's office in law enforcement and traffic work in Ulster county. President Huben congratulated the men and those they represented on the enviable reputation they had established in handling the duties entrusted to them and also commended them for the many humane acts they had done in the course of their work. He said that he regretted that Sergeant "Jack" Hopkins of Ellenville had been called to New York and was unable to be present.

Raymond F. Caunitz was also a guest of Kiwanis Thursday.

The speaker of the day was Marvin Parks, for five years located at Buenos Aires, South America, as a divisional engineer and operations manager for Pan-American Airways, who gave a most interesting talk on what airplane service means to South America, some of the conditions which flyers must contend with in that country and observations on matters relating to aviation generally.

Mr. Parks said that aviation has done a great deal more for South America than for North America. Here modern highways, railway service and easy methods of transportation are the rule, while in South America not only is there no such wealth of transportation facilities but travel from east to west is further and greatly complicated by the Andes Mountains, "the worst in the world." Although 13,500 feet is the highest peak that necessarily must be crossed there are others running from 22,000 to 24,000 feet high that can make more trouble should an aviator happen to stray from his path. Moreover the wind swirling around the massive peaks creates monster air pockets and eddies. Mr. Parks said that it was not unusual for a plane to suddenly drop, or shoot upward 4,000 feet, with such speed that an ordinary fire extinguisher would hang suspended in the air.

Some idea of what the airplane means in covering distances in the southern continent was given when it was stated that one journey, from a point in Peru, which would take at least two and a half days by boat and train could be covered by plane in 47 minutes. Another, from Boliva to Arica in northern Chili which by other methods of transportation would take 2½ to three weeks, can be done by plane in about three days. In some parts of the country, where burros are the only method of transportation a three weeks trip can be covered in one hour by plane.

Radio beams, beacons and other common equipment of flying fields in this country are missing and night flying is practically impossible in South America. They have radio stations, operated by natives, but the latter are not mechanically inclined and are not the equal of the average American in this respect. It had also been found that they were not very adaptable in giving out weather reports.

It was stated that American moving pictures are doing much to acquaint the people of South America with the U. S. and are also to a certain extent teaching them English. These pictures, said Mr. Parks, with their rich settings and the like, including frequent use of drinking scenes have given the impression that "Americans are very rich and a bunch of drunkards."

Mr. Parks proved very interesting in his description of radio beams and the manner in which they worked.

Asked about foreign planes the speaker said in regard to the reputed speed of four to five hundred miles an hour attained by German planes, that these records were made at the bottom of a power dive test and that American planes rated at 300 to 350 miles an hour were probably fully equal. He did not rate the German planes very highly, saying that they were being built so rapidly and of inferior material that they lacked strength. Such planes as they used in South America, he said, "couldn't come anywhere near us." He found the American planes far superior. As to the French, Mr. Parks said that they were using a great deal of American equipment.

'Stored' Rays of Sun Used in House Heating

Use of the stored rays of the sun for house heating is the subject of an extensive research program underway at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Seeking to utilize advantageously the vast energy emitted by the sun, and trap the heat for useful purposes of man, Tech has built an experimental house, designed to capture waste heat and "store" it in the basement.

In the basement of the especially designed laboratory house is a large well-insulated water storage tank to be used for ironing out the fluctuations in heat collected from a source so variable as the sun. The building's heating system consists of a method of forced air circulation so arranged that the flow of air can be either over the hot tank surface or through the coils of a refrigeration system to be installed later. This refrigeration system, operating on an absorption principle, will utilize sunlight as its heat source.

Prof. Hoyt Hottel of M. I. T. states that, although several types of energy collectors, or "heat traps," are to be tried, first attention is to be given to a shallow box-like heat collecting device placed in a recess on the roof of the building. The bottom of the box is a thin sheet of metal painted black to absorb the utmost amount of solar energy. Firmly fixed to the under side of the sheet is a series of small thin-walled metal tubes which are heated by contact with the sheet and which in turn heat water circulated through them.

The box has several covers of glass, interspaced with dead air regions, through which nearly all the sunlight can pass, but back through which little heat can escape. The sunlight is converted to heat when it strikes the metal sheet. Beneath the box is a layer of mineral wool to prevent the escape of heat in that direction.

After the water has been warmed in the heat collector, it passes to the storage tank in the basement.

Depending upon the size of the insulated tank, water can be kept hot from a few weeks to a half a year by this method.

Where They Came From — Wassail Bowls

GOOD wishes have been expressed around the wassail ("health to you") bowl for centuries. Wassailing became a Christmas feature in medieval times. Henry VII had a steward cry "Wassail" three times on entering with the wassail bowl. The custom was not confined to laymen, the monasteries calling their punch bowl "poculum caritatis."

Few jobs nowadays call for the doing of only one thing. "Most women in business need to be able to meet all kind of people under all types of circumstances. Home-economics-trained women have an advantage over women with other college training for they have specific training occupations in which there is little competition from men.

Living Christmas Tree Interesting

(By The Master Gardener)

Of late years, in many sections of the country, gardening enthusiasts have been experimenting with the purchase of a live evergreen as a Christmas tree, and subsequently planting it out-of-doors.

In regions where the ground does not become frozen, and the soil is workable, it is a simple matter to try out this plan, but where, because of weather conditions, the tree cannot be planted out-of-doors immediately after the holidays, it is rather a gamble to purchase a live tree, although it provides an interesting experiment for the gardener. It is also quite probable that one would have difficulty in obtaining balled and burlapped stock at such an unseasonable time of the year, but it might be possible if arrangements were made with the nurseryman sufficiently in advance.

In cold regions, where a gardener has this plan in mind, he should, in late fall, thoroughly prepare the planting site for the tree, and mulch the site heavily with hay, straw, or peat moss. The hole should be at least twice as large as the size of the root ball will necessitate, so be generous in your estimate of the size of hole which will be needed. Complete plant food should be mixed with the soil in the bottom of the hole, when the actual planting is done.

In areas where the ground becomes frozen and such previous preparation is not made, it is necessary, after the holiday season, to remove the tree to a damp, cool basement and keep the root ball moist until such time as conditions are suitable for planting out-of-doors.

If you wish to give the plan a trial this year, here is some information concerning the procedure to follow, and the comments of an evergreen grower on the idea:

Buy a balled and burlapped tree, not too large. When the tree is received, without removing the wrapping, wet the root ball thoroughly, then keep the roots cool and damp by placing the entire wrapped root ball in a large tub of peat moss. Keep this peat moss damp by watering every day—not too heavily. Keep the tree in as cool a room as possible. Excess heat may damage or kill the tree.

After the holidays, if ground and weather conditions are such that the tree cannot be planted out-of-doors promptly, remove tree, peat moss, tub and all to a cool basement room and keep the root ball moist. Plant out-of-doors just as soon as conditions are such that it is possible to do so.

Now for the comments of our friend the grower: He says the idea is feasible, providing the tree does not remain too long in the house and if it is properly planted outdoors after the holidays. For immediate planting out of doors after the holiday season, he states it is necessary that the hole be dug previously, and that the dirt used in packing about the roots be free from frost when planting is made. He considers firs better than spruces for this purpose, as they retain their needles to better advantage. He states he has seen a Douglas fir planted out in the spring after having been kept in a cool basement all winter, and the tree survived and made good growth, but that results under such conditions are very uncertain and one simply has to run the chance of failure or success.

Gardeners who have experimented with live Christmas trees in the more favored climates where outdoor planting is possible immediately, say the tree should not be kept unplanted more than two days after Christmas, as they have found it fatal to hold the tree in the atmosphere of the home longer than that period.

Yet another suggestion on live Christmas trees is made in Bulletin 52, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Department of Forest and Waters, "Hemlock—The State Tree of Pennsylvania." This bulletin suggests using a live hemlock (Tsuga Canadensis Linnaeus). The author suggests selecting a small bushy hemlock and planting it in a pot or tub, which may be used as a part of the landscaped yard or lawn throughout the year. Then during the holidays, the tree, in its container, may be brought into the home and decorated. It is stated that if kept well watered and if not allowed to remain too long in the warm house, the plant will again do well if placed out of doors after it has served as a Christmas tree.

Virtue's Worth

Laval, France (AP)—Virtue has just had a 300,000 franc (about $6,900) reward. That is the sum a jury awarded 19-year-old Madeline Lapierre for being "the most virtuous poor girl in the region." The money was left by a wealthy widow of Laval.

In contrast to the coordination of men, methods and machines that enables automobile factories to turn out new models at a rate of a car-a-minute, a New Jersey machinist who as a hobby built a single car by hand, spent 12 years at the job.

Loss From Forest Fires

Albany, Dec. 15 (Special)—Forest fires burned a total of 13,445 acres in New York state during 1939, approximately 28 per cent less than the acreage burned in the preceding year, the Conservation Department announced today. Figures compiled by the department and released by Commissioner Lithgow Osborne reveal that within the Adirondack and Catskill forest preserve a total of 636 fires were reported having burned 3,785 acres while in all other regions of the state receiving fire protection from the Conservation Department, 1,773 fires resulted in the destruction of 9,660 acres of land.

Pointer Trials

Pinehurst, N. C., Dec. 15 (AP)—The Pointer Club of America held trials here to see which dogs were best at finding quail. But first there had to be a drawing so all the dogs' names were placed in a cup. Who did the drawings? Rassie Wicker's pet quail, with the use of its beak.

Spee, Ship of Horror, Is Being Repaired as Crew Buries Victims

repair the damage suffered in the 14-hour sea battle.

Guani declined to say how long this extension of the formal 24-hour limit for visits of belligerent ships would run, but explained that it would be sufficient to permit rendering the battleship seaworthy.

While the work of patching up holes in the Admiral Graf Spee's armor went on, seven covered vans were ordered to the dock alongside the ship to carry 36 pine coffins to north cemetery in the heart of Montevideo.

The Admiral Graf Spee's commander, Captain Hans Langsdorff, turned out the ship's band to play a dirge and 100 seamen to escort the bodies. The normal crew complement is 926.

Eight more of the 60 wounded German seamen were landed last night.

Legs to Be Amputated

The four most seriously injured were taken to Pasteur Hospital. Two others had been put ashore shortly after the battered warship crept into sanctuary Wednesday night, the Achilles and Ajax at her heels.

Pasteur Hospital said both legs of one of the men received last night would have to be amputated. One of the others already was legless. A third had had an arm amputated and the fourth was in agony from burns. The remainder of the eight went to another hospital.

The Admiral Graf Spee's fuel and provisions were running low when she suddenly found herself in battle with three British cruisers off Uruguay Wednesday morning. This was graphically indicated by the height at which she rode at anchor here.

Three holes gaped on her starboard waterline forward and there was a yard and a half hole in her armor outside the crew quarters on the port side forward. Bulging plates indicated what must have been a severe explosion within the ship.

There was a large gap in the fighting tower, apparently from a shell that came over the stern during the chase. A portside gun-tower, housing six-inchers, was overturned.

Oxygen tanks for welding and metals were placed aboard the battleship yesterday.

Exeter Goes to Base

But damage and casualties were not alone the Admiral Graf Spee's. The 8,390-ton British cruiser Exeter—knocked out of the battle after four hours, leaving the fight to the Ajax and Achilles— was expected some time after dawn at drydock in the Argentine naval base of Puerto Belgrano, 120 miles southwest of Buenos Aires, seeking repairs.

One hundred beds were prepared at the naval hospital there for the Exeter's wounded. There were unconfirmed reports of some dead aboard the cruiser. The Achilles and Ajax messaged they had no dead and only a few wounded.

Apparently the beating the Exeter took from the Admiral Graf Spee's 11-inchers was too serious to permit the 1,500-mile voyage to Port Stanley, her Falkland Island base. She was reported making barely 14 knots—about half her potential speed.

Uruguayan officials who have taken no formal action to enforce observance of the 300-mile ocean neutrality belt, within which the battle was fought, said they were consulting neighbor states to reach some means of keeping such encounters farther at sea

It was possible Uruguay would seek German and British guarantees against any renewal of naval warfare such as transpired Wednesday almost within gunshot of the national capital.

Experiences Described

Sixty-two British seamen, taken from nine merchantmen by the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee during six weeks of raiding, were surrendered to British officials here last night.

They described their experience as prisoners during the sea battle between the Spee and three British cruisers.

They told of ordeal of waiting in cells below decks, counting and cheering each British hit on their floating prison, realizing at the same time that they were doomed if the battleship went down. Their prison was directly under one of the Admiral Graf Spee's 11-inch turrets.

An officer of the British steamer Doric Star, taken prisoner when his ship was sunk December 4 off the African coast, told how the cannonading awakened the prisoners early Wednesday.

"We knew what that sound meant," he said, "and we knew it was serious when the guards of our quarters locked and barred the doors and left to go to their battle stations.

"As the battle progressed most of us realized that a British victory might mean our deaths, but nevertheless there was singing and cheering for the attackers.

"Altogether we counted 17 hits by British shells on the Graf Spee in various encounters that day.

"Probably you won't belive this, but several men who were shaving when the cannonading began went on and finished the job."

The officer said he was gargling for a sore throat when a shell fragment ripped into the prisoners' quarters. No one was hit, he said, "but I swallowed all the medicine."

The recoil from the Admiral Graf Spee's crashing guns shook the ship.

'War Is Over'

"Every time a shot was fired it seemed as if the whole roof had collapsed over us," the Briton said "The grandest news we ever had was when an officer came down and told us, 'Gentlemen, the war is over for you. We just entered the Montevideo harbor.'"

Another freighter captain among the 62 freed Britons told of being called to the bridge of the battleship just before the release when Captain Langsdorff told him:

"The cruisers made a gallant fight. When people fight like that personal enmity is lost . . . those British are hard."

The erstwhile prisoners included the masters of four British freighters besides the Doric Star —the Huntsman, Ashlea, Trevanion and Africa Shell—and seamen from the Clement, Newton Beech, Pairo and Streonshalh.

They trooped down a ladder to a tugboat, carrying seabags and in some cases lifebelts from their lost ships. They were conducted first to the British consulate where they were warned against talking about their experiences. It was said they had pledged secrecy as a condition for release.

The British seamen offered themselves as "exhibit A" in support of Britain's denial that gas was used in the battle, as the Germans said yesterday.

One of the prisoners declared: "During the whole fight, the German sailors had gas masks—we had none.

"If gas was strong enough to spoil food, as they said, it certainly was strong enough to affect us, and you can see for yourself none of us was gassed.

"It is true about the food being spoiled, but it was spoiled by a British shell which exploded in the center of the galley, wrecking everything.

"I saw one man who was said to be blinded by gas. He was blinded when a shell exploded almost in his face."

(Authorized German sources in Berlin were less positive about charging the use of mustard gas today than they were yesterday when it was said that a number of the Admiral Graf Spee's crew had been gassed and the food ruined.)

Of North Carolina's area, 3,620 square miles is water.

Jury to Report

The grand jury, which has been in attendance at the December term of Supreme Court, will report Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock to Justice Francis Bergan, presiding justice. District Attorney Cleon B. Murray and Assistant District Attorney James Connelly have presented a large number of matters to the grand jury and among the cases have been several of importance.

B. C. Lancaster, 93, of Waxachie, Tex., recently paid taxes for the 73rd consecutive year on a farm near Sterrett. He has been a resident of Ellis county since his arrival in 1854 in a covered wagon. After the Civil War in 1865 he borrowed money from his father, purchased the Sterrett farm and has owned it since.

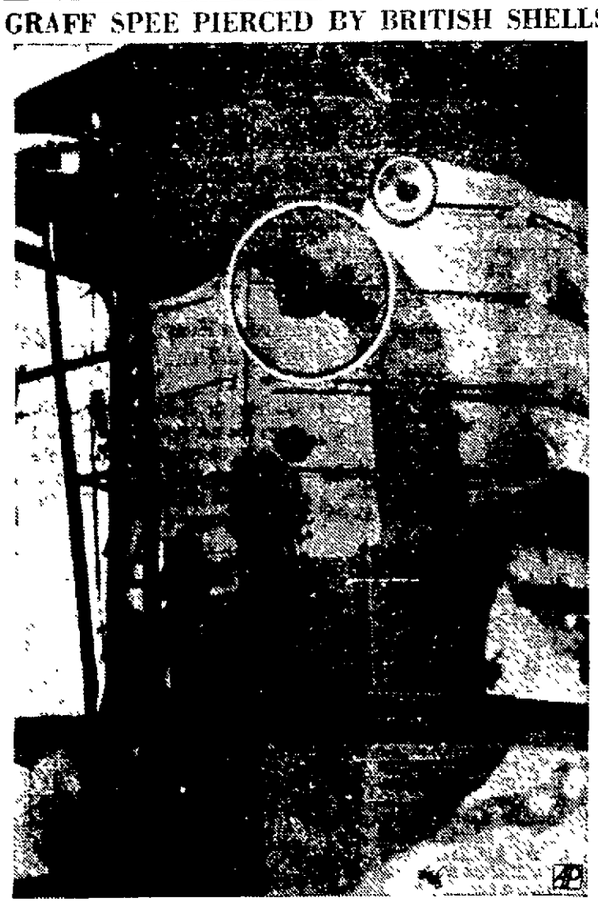
GRAFF SPEE PIERCED BY BRITISH SHELLS



Indicated by circles are holes in the super-structure of the German "pocket battleship" Admiral Graf Spee, put there by well-directed shells of three British cruisers who chased the Nazi warship down the coast of Uruguay in the most spectacular naval battle of the war. The picture, taken as the Graf Spee rode at anchor in Montevideo harbor, was transmitted from Buenos Aires to New York by radio even as British warships ringed the harbor and bottled up their prize.

Migrant Labor Seen as Pariahs

Study by WPA Finds Roving Agricultural Workers Are Ostracized.

PHOENIX.—Stories of exploitation and social ostracism of migratory workers presented in "The Grapes of Wrath" and other works of fiction are closely paralleled in a report on migrant families prepared by PWA research workers.

The report, entitled "Migratory Cotton Workers in Arizona," gave a detailed account of the activities of 518 migrant families in this state early in 1938.

It said homeless workers were attracted to Arizona by distorted advertising, only to find below subsistence wages, unsanitary living conditions, and social barriers as rigid and inflexible as to be found anywhere.

Seek Cheap Labor.

"Although Arizona's most valuable crop (cotton) cannot be harvested without them," the report said, "itinerant cotton pickers are regarded as pariahs, and farmers feel their children are degraded by contact in school with poor migrants."

The report said as much as $900,000 had been spent by Arizona producers in a single year to attract a cheap labor supply to this state. Mediums usually used were display advertising in newspapers, handbills, and publicity, all promising good pay, good living conditions in the camps and a "healthy, salubrious climate."

"Actually," the investigators reported, "possible earnings appear to have been much lower than those stated in the advertising. Under prevailing wages their jobs ordinarily provide only a meager day-to-day existence at best, and the workers have no reserves to tide them over slack times."

Average earnings of a cotton picker were found to be about $6 to $8 a week, and only in one instance was a worker able to earn as much as $16 a week. Large families with four workers or more averaged a gross income of $16.38 for a week's work.

Willing to Work.

The report presented a scene of poor living conditions in the camps, describing them as "filthy, makeshift collection of shelters, frequently lacking even elementary sanitary facilities."

Many migrants must appeal for direct relief upon completion of the harvest, the report said, because their meager earnings will not carry them as far as the next area where a harvest may be under way.

"The migrant's plan for further movement at the end of the season reflects his bewilderment and hopelessness in a situation where few had enough money to go anywhere.

"The very fact of this migration is an indication of his will to undergo hardships for the sake of a job. The migrant workman is not a relief applicant by choice, but by bitter necessity."

Kansas Food Terminal Is One of Largest in World

FORT WORTH, TEXAS. — A $4,000,000 public market at Kansas City, Kan., one of the largest in the world, is among $44,000,000 worth of Public Works administration projects now under construction in seven southwestern states.

Director George M. Bull said that the Kansas City food terminal is approximately one-half finished. It will be a central marketing point for fruits, vegetables and farm produce from 40 states and a distribution center for the entire Midwest.

Two refrigeration buildings are included, one five stories high and the other one story. Four produce buildings will cost nearly $1,500,000 and a farmers' market with selling space for 500 farmers will cost another $180,000. The Missouri river levee, upon which the food terminal borders, will have $200,000 worth of improvements in the completed project.

A $2,000,000 grain terminal, financed by PWA, also will be built on the levee.

British Build New Plane To Meet Invasion Threat

LONDON.—A source close to the air ministry said that production of the new British Defiant two-seated fighting plane was being hurried to meet the possibility of a German invasion of the Netherlands.

The plane was described as "the greatest fighting plane ever made." It has a wing area of 25 square feet, carries a power-operated gun turret and has a 1,000-horsepower motor. Pilots who have tested it were said to have been "bewildered" by its range and maneuverability.

23-Inch-Tall Czech Baron Wants a Chance at Hitler

FLORENCE, S. C.—Baron Richard Nowak, a mighty mite from Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, who stands 23 inches tall in his stocking feet, says his greatest desire is to get Adolf Hitler in a dark room.

"I hate Hitler," growled the 19-year-old midget. "I wouldn't want to say what I'd do to him alone in a dark room."

While he admits he wouldn't be able to outslug the German dictator, the baron said, "I'd crawl all over him like a hornet."

Painted Hair Latest Feminine Beauty Fad

Chicago, Dec. 15 (AP).—Startling, but true, the latest decorative feminine beauty fad for holiday gaiety is, it appears, painted hair.

Hair painted red, green, blue—or pink and blue if you wish—to match the trimming on the evening gown or the sandals.

Bu that's not all. Another new fashion for evening is to hang a Christmas tree ornament on the crowning glory.

All this was uncovered today in looking in upon the Illinois Hairdressers' Association to see if there were any last minute style notes for the holidays. And one beautician, Gene Pesce of Oak Park, Ill., was discovered painting hair.

A special mixed pigment that is soluble in water was applied on the hair with an atomizer. As a demonstration a girl's blonde tresses were painted dubonnet. The paint washed out with soap and water.

To give added glamour the painted hair can be sprinkled with metallic powder. Thus a pink painted head can be made to sparkle with silver—just the thing for that pink tulle frock embroidered in silver. The hair can be combed and rearranged after painting.

Today the motorist can buy three new cars for the price he once paid for one. In 1907 the wholesale price of a car, exclusive of many extras, was $2,131 while in 1939 the average wholesale price was $620. Back in 1907 motoring was an uncertain adventure and the motorist had to be a good mechanic to keep his "horseless carriage" rolling.

"Chevrolet's FIRST Again!"

Only Chevrolet has this EXCLUSIVE VACUUM-POWER SHIFT!

—and only Chevrolet's Exclusive Vacuum-Power Shift has a hidden power cylinder which does 80% of the gearshifting work for you!

Why shift for yourself? Why do it the hard way? Chevrolet's Exclusive Vacuum-Power Shift is controlled from the steering column by an extra-short lever—its end right under the rim of the steering wheel, within easy finger reach. The only effort required of the driver is to move the lever; the vacuum cylinder supplies the effort required to move the shifter forks and gears within the transmission. Instead of supplying all the effort of shifting, the driver supplies only one-fifth; the compact, simple vacuum mechanism, positive and unfailing in operation, does the rest.

80% AUTOMATIC—ONLY 20% DRIVER EFFORT!

ALL steering column gearshifts look more or less alike. . . . But only Chevrolet's New Exclusive Vacuum-Power Shift acts for itself when you touch the lever. . . . Only this one advanced steering column gearshift is 80% automatic in operation!

You see, Chevrolet's New Exclusive Vacuum-Power Shift has a hidden power cylinder. And this power cylinder goes into action the instant you start to shift gears. It does 80% of the work for you instead of letting you push and tug and do all the work yourself!

You want the newest and best—the best in driving and riding ease, the best in styling and road-action—and on all these counts "Chevrolet's FIRST Again!"

White House Party Is U. S. Triumph As Enemies Mingle

Washington, Dec. 15 (AP)—Smiling diplomats, resplendent in gold braid, plumed hats and clanking swords, thronged the White House last night for a reception which, on the surface, moved as smoothly as if there were no war abroad.

It was a victory for state department protocol, which kept the representatives of unfriendly nations from meeting face to face.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt, greeting the envoys of 53 countries, shook hands successively with the Chinese and Japanese delegations and a little later received representatives of Spain, Soviet Russia and Great Britain in that order.

Careful spacing by aides kept the groups from rubbing shoulders in the reception line. After it broke up, little knots formed in the state dining room as distinct as if they were miles instead of feet apart.

Nobody appeared to rush away, but an hour and a half after the party started at 9 p. m., all the chiefs of mission had left the White House.

The Finnish minister, Hjalmar Procope, was greeted warmly wherever he turned. At one point, Finnish and German envoys were the centers of adjacent groups, but Procope moved toward the refreshment table for a cup of punch with the South African minister and others.

300,000 Persons Turn Out For 'Gone With Wind'

Atlanta, Dec. 15 (AP).—This pleasantly dazed city today prepared to close out its "Gone With the Wind" jamboree in a final flourish of floodlights and fun.

The promoters of the movie made from Margaret Mitchell's novel paraded a large covey of stars safely last night through a crowd larger than the combined armies that fought for Atlanta 75 years ago and the Junior League swung out with a ball.

But the main event is tonight's premiere of the picture. Clark Gable and the other stars rang sincere with their belief "I-think-you-folks-are-grand" speeches after a ride through a crowd of 300,000 plus (police estimate) that might have given the visiting glamorites a rough time if it had decided to forget its manners.

The ball was decorative with furlongs of smilax, and fair belles in hundreds of really pretty gowns. The Atlanta Constitution publisher, Clark Howell, was master of ceremonies.

An Indianapolis woman, in jail for drunken driving, was released by the judge so that she could get married. We hope she knows what she is doing.

Houston, Tex.—European folk dances have struck this section like a whirlwind.

Jitterbugs find them intriguing. Old-timers find them a relief and qualified persons predict the rest of the country will take them up.

The schottische, "Put Your Little Foot," the rye waltz, the polka—standbys last century — have struck both high and low society. In beer joints, private ballrooms, country clubs, the best hotels—everyone "puts his little foot" these days.

Just what is responsible for the sudden popularity no one is certain, but this explanation is offered:

Old Stuff

Vacationing folks who traveled to the hill country near Kerrville, Tex., where the population includes many people of German, Polish and other Central European descent, returned with word of the dances.

They learned they were old stuff at the Saengerbund (singing society) hall here. The dancing public flocked there, learned the steps, and carried them to dancing places everywhere.

So great was the demand, the city recreation department began offering free dancing lessons each evening at several parks, and dancing instructors quickly put the schottische and other dances on their lists.

Let Vincent Lopez, orchestra leader, tell his experience:

"When I came here to play a hotel engagement, I thought someone was kidding when they asked me to play 'Put Your Little Foot There.' I had never heard of it."

He saw a demonstration of the dance, heard the music, and became enthusiastic.

A couple at the Saengerbund swings into Houston's most popular dance.

"This thing is going to be far more popular than the Lambeth Walk or The Big Apple," he said. "It'll sweep the country."

Skip, Skip, Skip

At least half of Lopez' requests during his engagement were for "Put Your Little Foot," the most popular of the dances and tunes.

So interested was Lopez, he had his vocalist and composer, Sunny Schuyler, write lyrics for the tune.

Dancers say it's easy—and a world of fun.

Putting their little feet there.

Modern Diets Contain Many Protective Foods

Diets have tended to improve in the last 50 years when measured by the protective foods—such as milk, green leafy vegetables, tomatoes, and citrus fruits—consumed by city and village families. The current Yearbook of the department of agriculture includes a table compiled from many scattered dietary studies ranging back to 1885 and covering three ranges of expenditures—comparatively low, medium, and above average. The table shows sharp declines in grain products and meats in the diets and a rise in four groups of protective foods.

Families spending $1.25 to $1.87 a person a week bought 294 pounds of grain products for each individual in the period 1885 to 1904, but dropped consistently to 155 pounds in 1935-37. Meat, fish, and poultry consumption dropped from 123 pounds in the earlier period to 85 pounds. Increases are noted in milk and its products, from 41 quarts to 118 quarts; eggs, 12 dozen increased to 16 dozen; leafy, green, and yellow vegetables from 24 pounds to 53 pounds, and tomatoes and citrus fruits from 10 pounds to 45 pounds.

Shifts in the medium expenditures and above average groups were generally in the same direction but not quite so pronounced. The drop in grain-products consumption in the families spending on the 1935 basis of from $2.50 to $3.12 a person a week (a fairly liberal allowance) was from 218 pounds to 174 pounds; meats down from 204 pounds to 139 pounds. Increases were: Milk group, 84 quarts to 191 quarts; eggs, 20 dozen to 27 dozen; vegetables, 48 to 95 pounds, and tomatoes and citrus, 59 to 98 pounds.

This table shows that the lowest of these three income groups is now buying more milk and more protective vegetables than the more liberal spenders were getting in the 1885 to 1904 period, and almost as many eggs and as much of the protective tomato and citrus fruits as well.

Rigid Air Safety Code Benefits U. S. Aviation

One reason for the supremacy of American aviation over foreign rivals is supplied by estimates that this country's commercial air transport companies spend 500 per cent more each year on research, maintenance and inspection than all the rest of the world's airlines.

Rigid safety standards are applied to even seemingly minor items of air equipment by aviation inspection crews. An example of their unusual requirements is found in a report on the development of a new type of plane refuelling hose now in use by major oil companies having refuelling contracts at airports from coast to coast.

Five years of research by scientists of the B. F. Goodrich laboratories went into the perfecting of the new hose which incorporates safeguards against two peculiar aviation problems. A special compound of synthetic rubber was developed for the hose to prevent the possibility of small particles of natural rubber—which has a tendency to disintegrate in contact with gasoline—from passing into the motors. The new compound is said by technicians to be completely gasoline-proof.

Stranded stainless steel wire was also woven into the hose in order that static electricity which might have been generated by the friction of air on the plane's surfaces in flight might be conducted harmlessly to the ground through the wire, which is attached to couplings on the field.

(Author of "Etiquette," "The Personality of a House," "The Blue Book of Social Usage," etc.)

Fish for Dinner

Dear Mrs. Post: If fish is the main course at dinner, should the fish knives and forks be used or the dinner knives and forks?

Answer: If the fish is to be elevated to the position of the main course, then it is logical to suppose that the big dinner fork and knife would properly belong with it. Sensibly, it depends on the sizes of your silver. If yours is small, use the big forks and knives; if unusually large, use the smaller ones.

How to Ring for the Maid

Dear Mrs. Post: (a) After ringing for the maid and she appears in the dining-room, should I wait for her to come and stand by my side before giving her instructions, or do I tell her what I want as soon as she appears at the door? (b) How does the maid know what she is to come in for?

Answer: (a) If you are alone at the table, you speak to her as she comes within very easy speaking distance, but not necessarily beside you. If there are other people at table and if what you have to say to her cannot be indicated by signal, she must then come close to you so that what you say is an aside to her without attracting any one's attention. (b) A system has to be devised, such as one bell to change plates for next course, two bells to offer the dish again (or refill glasses if dishes have just been passed), and three bells to mean "I want to speak to you."

Does Formal Wording Mean Dress Formally?

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it ever necessary to say anything about dress when invitations are worded formally? Doesn't this sufficiently denote that the occasion demands dress be formal? Our club is giving a big dance and sending invitations which are formally worded in the third person, and one of the committee has suggested that we should also include the words "formal dress" at the bottom of the page. She thinks this would eliminate possible confusion, whereas I don't understand why there should be any confusion to begin with.

Answer: You are quite right in your opinion. However, if the occasions are infrequent when people in your community wear evening dress it might be more helpful to some of them to be instructed definitely about these clothes, and add "evening dress" or "formal evening dress" as the occasion requires.

Christmas Toys Tell Kids How World Works

By The (AP) Feature Service

THE NEW TOYS are both educational and entertaining. They are educational enough to teach Junior a lot about farming, radio broadcasting, or business. They are so entertaining that Dad will enjoy them just as much as he ever enjoyed Sonny Boy's toy train. And relatively few of them are warlike. Here's what we mean:

A RADIO SOUND-EFFECTS studio. This duplicates any noise from that of a frying egg to a hurricane. Air rushing from toy balloon is a tire going flat.

TOY TELEPHONES that answer back, typewriters that typewrite, and adding machines that add. For young publishers, there is an authentic newspaper printing press.

A COAL LOADER for mechanical trains Other new accessories for toy railroads· Block signals that prevent collisions, billboards, and roadside diners.

A MODEL FARM. Every sort of agricultural implement, from fertilizer spreaders to disc harrows, is on the market. There is even a cackling hen that lays eggs

Bonus for Trees

In 1870, when trees were few along the streets of The Dalles, Ore., or Dalles City as the town was then called, the city council ordained that whoever planted a shade tree along the street borders of his property would receive a credit of 50 cents, doubtless to be applied on his taxes or other city assessments. Thus today's beautifully shaded streets of The Dalles are indices of the birth places of the original property owners. New Englanders planted elms. Those from Missouri and the Ohio valley favored sycamores and black locusts The locust trees of The Dalles have aroused comment from botanical authorities. A botanist of the United States department of agriculture, who examined these trees a few years ago, pronounced them the finest specimens of the species he had ever seen, and much larger than those found where they are native

Both are interested in every phase of Christian activities in the Far East and especially in the educational work at Aoyama Gakiun in Tokyo

Dr. Iglehart is in great demand as a speaker and his presence at Trinity is greatly appreciated by the parish. The public is cordially invited to this first special Christmas service at the church

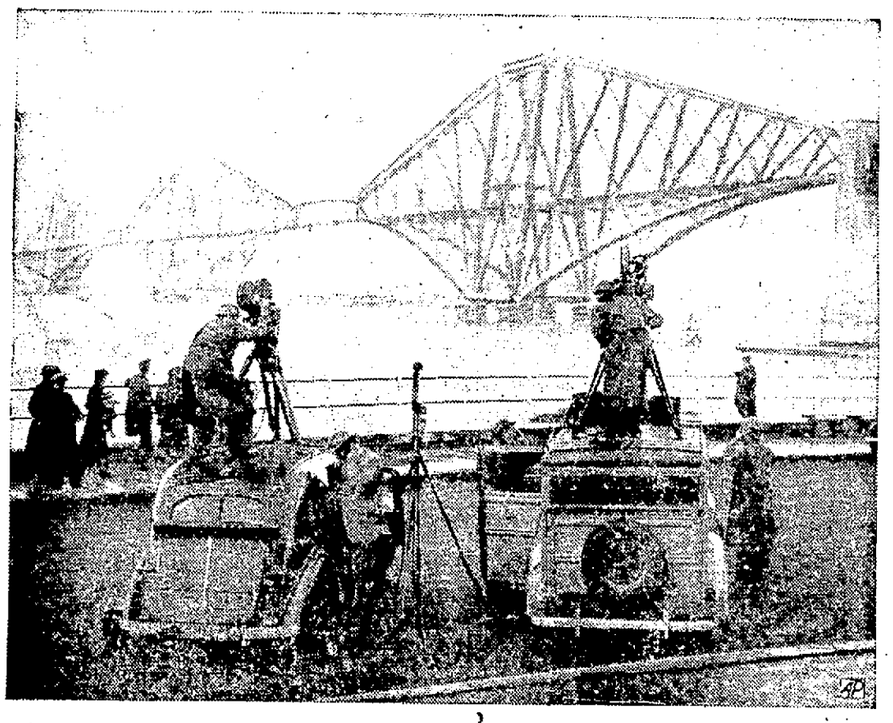
FLAG FOR 'DEVIL DOGS'—From Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the U. S. Asiatic fleet, the Fourth regiment of marines at Shanghai gets a new regimental flag. Interest in marines stationed in China increases with the approach of Jan. 26, when U. S. trade treaty with Japan, cancelled six months ago, ends formally. It was signed in February, 1911.

SIP—With her first champagne does Eileen Neumann, 18, a working girl, toast her fancy debut matching that of a socialite and given her by nine New York men of cafe society.

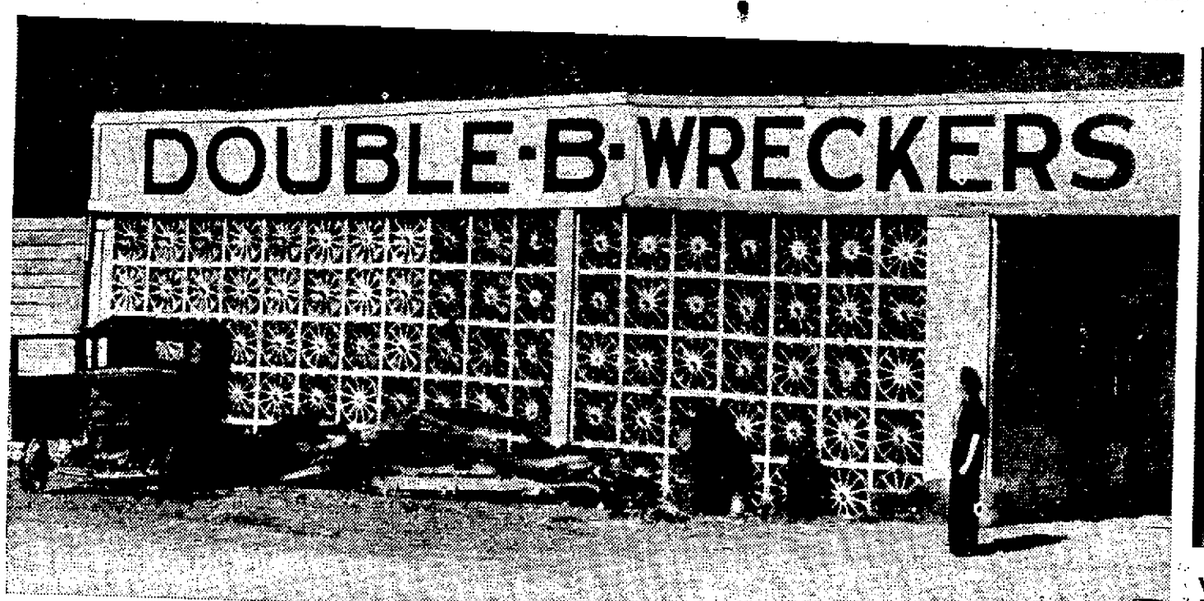
BEST GIRL—Blonde Jo Anne Simmons has a right to wear the military cap of John Kimbrough. She's his best girl; he's backfield star for Texas Aggies' football team.

NOT A WORD, NOW, ABOUT POLITICS—Far from the tumult of Washington, D. C., where he'll soon be due with the opening of Congress, is Vice President John Nance Garner (left), shown at Uvalde, Tex., with Ross Brumfield, his hunting companion for the last 30 years. The two hunt, fish, and swap yarns together whenever "Cactus Jack" gets back to Texas.

FEATHERED FRIENDS—Three times daily does Vice President John Garner (above) feed his bantam chickens—visits they seem to relish, too, at Garner's home in Uvalde, Tex. The chickens are a favorite winter hobby with him.



READY FOR THE RE-TAKE—The last world war never saw anything like this: newsreel cameramen waiting at Scotland's Firth of Forth to "shoot" arrival of Nazi bombers.



WAGON WHEELS TURN TO GOOD ADVANTAGE—If the Yuma, Ariz., business man who built this garage-repair shop sings "Wagon Wheels" while doing his chores, don't be surprised. He used old wagon wheels for one of his walls, as shown.

WAR WORK—Kermit Roosevelt, son of the late Pres. Theodore Roosevelt and kinsman of F.D.R., is now a major with the British army, serving as a machine gun expert.

FRENCH HAVE THEIR JOKE—In a Paris shop this animated toy showing a "Don Quixotic" Hitler charging futilely at a windmill, followed by plump be-medaled Hermann Goering, attracts much attention. Brisk buying and huge crowds characterize the Christmas season in the French capital, with dolls and toys drawing inspiration from the war on the west front.

FAIR EXCHANGE—Viscount Nuffield (left), British motor magnate who by June, 1939, had given some $67,000,000 to English charities, plus $400,000 to Red Cross on Oct. 10, accepts a coughdrop from Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood.

WATCH HIM NEXT YEAR—This is Bimelech, Col. E. R. Bradley's two-year-old expected to show up well in next year's Kentucky derby—and maybe the Preakness. With C. M. Colvin up, he's exercising at farm near Lexington, Ky.

EYEFUL—Typical of any American farm lad with an entry in a livestock show are Archie Dickison, 17, of Alvin, Ill., or Charles Burton, 17 (lower), of Mineral Point, Wis., with pensive eyes on judging at recent Chicago exposition.

HEARTS AND FLOWERS—Like a derby winner, 40-year-old Barry wears a floral wreath and gets a last tug from Barbara Alger, 2, at his farewell party in Newton, Mass. Children mourned his departure for an animal rescue farm.

PRIZE—To Painter Luigi Lucioni, who did this portrait of Ethel Waters, Negro dramatic star, was awarded the $200 popular prize at the Carnegie Institute's international exhibition of paintings shown at Pittsburgh, Pa.

NOW FOR FOOD!—His appetite whetted by a performance with the Metropolitan Opera, Baritone Herbert Janssen nicks a cake in N. Y. apartment. Ban on meals before a performance explains this relish for after-opera snacks.

Finland Appeals To Soviet to Stop

a single Finnish soldier was stationed.

A few miles back of the lines on a darkened railway platform a hundred Finnish civilians stood watching a light glistening from a hospital train. At regular intervals, two men appeared at a train window, reached out and grasped the handles of a stretcher handed up to them.

600 Soldiers Arrive

A Red Cross officer said approximately 600 soldiers had arrived from the front since the start of the war. All came from the Taipale river district.

Russian casualties in the same district were estimated by army officers at 2,000, including many killed at close range by machine-gun fire.

The officers said the Finnish dead were "very few" and those wounded were mostly shrapnel cases.

Red Cross officials said the Finnish hospital service was one of the most efficient in existence. In the critical days preceding the start of the invasion, a large number of regular passenger coaches were converted into hospital units to hold stretchers. When the war came, the trains were waiting on sidings.

At the front stations, the wounded were placed in buses and taken to hospitals back of the lines and later into the interior.

Civilians outside watched the proceedings intently with the usual calm silence.

Freighter Is Scuttled

Capetown, Union of South Africa, Dec. 15 (AP)—The 2,989 ton German freighter Adolf Leonhardt was scuttled when intercepted by a British warship, it was announced officially today.

A British war office appeal for binoculars brought in 600 pairs in two days, several from German refugees who, as officers in the World war, used them "against England."

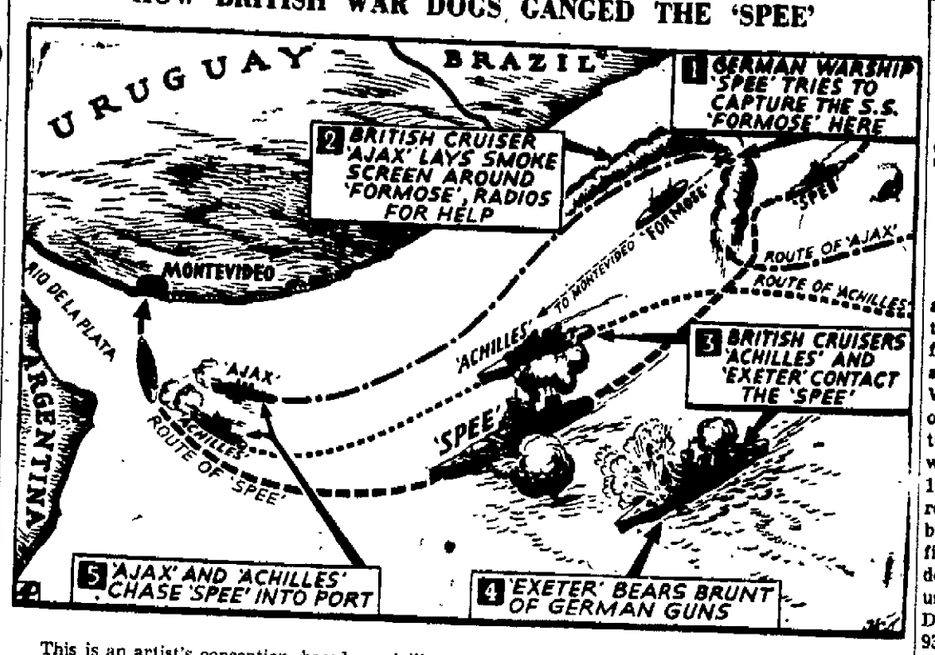
HOW BRITISH WAR DOGS GANGED THE 'SPEE'



This is an artist's conception, based on civilian eye-witness accounts, of how the Nazi "pocket battleship" Admiral Graf Spee pounced on the French merchant ship S. S. Formose and stirred up a hornet's nest of British cruisers, which drove the "Spee" to shelter in Montevideo harbor. High spot of the encounter is shown at No. 3, where at least two of the British cruisers fired on the German raider.

BRITISH GUNNERS WRECK GRAF SPEE'S SCOUT PLANE

This radio photo shows how British gunners—either lucky or expert marksmen—shot away the motor and tail (circles) of the scouting seaplane aboard the German "pocket battleship" Admiral Graf Spee as three British cruisers blasted away at the sleek Nazi raider in a 14-hour running battle down the coast of Uruguay. The picture was taken as the Graf Spee was anchored in the Montevideo after outrunning the British. The plane still is lashed to its catapult and the decks are stewn with wreckage. Aboard are 36 dead and more than 60 wounded in the cannonading. (Photo transmitted from Buenos Aires to New York by radio).

The funeral of Martin J. Lynch was held from the Wolf Funeral Home, 340 Broadway, Thursday at 9 a. m., thence to St. Joseph's Church at 9:30 where a high Mass of requiem was celebrated for the repose of his soul by the Rev. Edmund Burke. During the Offertory Thomas Dolan sang "O Salutaris" and as the body was borne from the church sang "Ave Maria." While the remains reposed in the home approximately 500 friends of the deceased called to pay their respects to one who was held in the highest esteem. A profusion of floral offerings was banked around the flag-draped casket. Spiritual bouquets in the form of Mass cards were numerous. The casket bearers who were nephews of the deceased were: Jack Morris, Martin Haggerty, John Haggerty, James Haggerty. A large funeral cortege accompanied the remains to St. Mary's cemetery where the Rev. Father Burke pronounced the final absolution. While the remains were being lowered to its final resting place a firing squad under Corporal Al Mellville, Vice Commander Jerry Martin, Vice Commander John Cleveland, Jack Flemming, Charles Thorn and Herman Dietz fired a volley over the grave of their deceased comrade. Bugler Frank Sass then sounded taps.

Forest Is Dedicated To Author of 'Trees'

Far back in the mountains of North Carolina is a stand of timber, much of it aboriginal, which will never feel the woodsman's ax. Contrary to usual forest service practice (which manages and harvests and replants forest land), the Joyce Kilmer memorial forest will be preserved in perpetuity as a tribute to the man who wrote perhaps the most widely known poem about trees.

The 3,800 acre tract might easily have inspired Kilmer's verse. The visitor entering it plunges into a vast virgin forest. Giant poplars, as much as 20 feet in circumference, soar toward the sky, accompanied by hemlocks, huge red oaks and many other varieties. This unusual forest will be preserved as a natural refuge for the trees the poet revered.

The area, a remote cove, has been made accessible to visitors in the past few years and further development is planned. From a parking area, trails lead to points of scenic or botanical interest in the forest. One trail about half a mile long leads from Little Santeetlah creek to a giant hemlock tree, beneath which is a granite boulder. A bronze plaque on the boulder bears this simple inscription: "Joyce Kilmer, 165th Infantry, Rainbow Division, Soldier and Poet. Author of Trees. Born in New Brunswick, N. J., December 6, 1886. Killed in action in France—June 30, 1918."

Other trails lead to Unicol mountain and Stratton Bald, peaks a mile high, with views of thousands of acres of unbroken timberland. Misty waterfalls, cascades and profuse vegetation greet the hiker on these trails.

Central Montana Dinosaurs

Central Montana dinosaur beds are proving a treasure trove for amateur paleontologists. Oscar Mueller, Lewiston attorney, and his son George, recently discovered about 60 pounds of fossilized bones 20 miles north of Teigen. The bones were badly deteriorated, but the finders surmised that they once were part of the skeleton of a horned dinosaur or Certopian, which was about twice the size of an elephant. Young Mueller found, when he attempted to assemble the bones, that most pieces were from the head, which was equipped with a shield of bone. Horned dinosaurs were equipped with either two or three horns for fighting, Mueller said.

Financial and Commercial

Stocks Turned Reactionary In Sales Thursday

New York, Dec. 15 (AP).—Mild and selective recoveries crept into the stock market today but many issues lingered in minus territory.

While losses and gains of small fractions were about evenly divided near the final hour, there were one or two sizable setbacks in evidence. Dealings were slack from the start, with the turnover for the full session pointing to around 600,000 shares.

The fact commodities again followed an irregularly lower route tended to discourage extensive buying in the stock list, brokers said. In addition, light tax selling continued as a handicap and cloudiness of next quarter's business outlook served to inspire wariness among some traders. Others, though, felt markets had yet to discount the substantial industrial stride of the past several months.

Pivotal shares attracting support were Bethlehem, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Kennecott, Westinghouse, Southern Pacific and Pennsylvania.

Lacking rising stamina were Western Union, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Sperry, Cerro De Pasco and American Telephone.

Bonds were uneven and foreign markets no better than steady.

In the curb American Cyanamid "B," Lake Shore and Creole Petroleum edged upward.

Quotations by Morgan Davis & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, 15 Broad street, New York city, branch office, 48 Main street, R. B. Osterhoudt, manager.

Says Truck Hi-jacked

Rochelle Park, N. J., Dec. 15 (AP)—George A. Paulk, 34, of Athens, N. Y., reported to police today that a truck he was driving filled with wines and liquors valued at $23,800 was hijacked by an armed trio who took him for a five and a half hour ride after binding and gagging him. The abandoned truck was found in Hasbrouck Heights, with 150 of its 700-case cargo still intact. The consignment, owned by a New York firm was being moved from New York city to Buffalo, N. Y. Paulk told Police Chief William Powell that one of the trio jumped from their car and forced him at gunpoint from the truck cab while the heavy vehicle was ascending a hill on Route 17 near Hillburn, N. Y., just across the state line.

'March of Time' Features War and News Gathering

This month's "March of Time," entitled "Newsfronts of War—1940," now showing at Reade's Kingston Theatre, presents an unusual film story of the highlights of the eventful year 1939, and shows how the year's most momentous developments were reported by America's great news-gathering organizations, including The Associated Press, of which The Freeman is a member.

"Newsfronts of War—1940" gives American movie-goers an opportunity to see "inside" the big press associations. It also contains unusual footage showing Soviet Russia's industry, natural resources and transportation—and how much help Hitler expects to get from Russia in the current war.

German Warships Dare British in Jutland Vicinity

gion, the British were not surprised that they met German planes in large numbers so quickly yesterday when they sighted the venturesome German naval squadron.

Merchant shipping continued to suffer wartime losses yesterday and last night.

One member of the crew was killed and 42 were rescued when the 7,400-ton British tanker San Alberto was damaged by "enemy action" off England's southwest coast. A warship landed 36 survivors today.

The Swedish steamer Algol sank after striking a mine between Denmark and Sweden.

The 731-ton Belgian steamer Yvonne was reported to have escaped damage when attacked December 5 by a German plane.

The 4,158-ton British steamer Stanwood was disclosed to have sunk Sunday in Falmouth harbor while a fire was being fought in her hold.

Two flash-type bombs exploded in two Birmingham motion picture theatres last night after a Birmingham court sentenced two Irish Republican army men to death for a bombing of last August 25.

The war office today announced the names of six prisoners of war taken from German submarines in addition to 12 named two days ago and 144 for the first three months of the war.

WEST SHOKAN

Mrs. Nettie Jones and sister, Mrs. Addie Kelder called on their West Shokan Heights neighbor, Miss Ollie Burgher, Monday evening.

Contractor Albert North is progressing favorably with the frame work of Superintendent of Highways Claude Bell's new house on the West Shokan Heights mountain road. Several carpenters are employed including George Burgher, Clarence Burgher, his son-in-law, and his son Frank North

John Nagel is employed by Dick Large leveling off dirt hauled by trucks on his driveway. Judge Lester S. Davis gave Johnny a helping hand, just in case of a hard freeze-up.

Marshall Roosa, of Watson Hallow road has cut down one of the century old hard maple trees near his residence for firewood. The tree was showing notable signs of decay.

Miss Elinor Breithaupt of Phoenicia, county welfare investigator, was a recent caller in town.

Steps in Animal Learning Shown by Scientific Test

Use of tools by animals came into existence long before man or even the higher apes evolved, Dr. Carl J. Warden, associate professor of psychology at Columbia university, says in reporting the completion of a series of tests. It was discovered that the lower primates were capable of employing a series of rakes to obtain food placed out of their reach.

Not only did the monkeys use the rakes, which varied from one to about three feet in length, but they developed an insight into the problem which enabled them to succeed in using the tools without a haphazard trial and error method.

Failure to get the food caused some of the monkeys to act very much like spoiled children. When the problem became too difficult for some of them to solve they flew into a tantrum, kicking their feet, biting the rakes and tearing their hair. On the other hand success often made them eager to continue using the tools.

The monkeys were placed in a cage approximately three feet square and food was left on a long platform just out of their reach. The first step was to leave a short rake lying along side of the food in such a manner that if the monkey pulled in the rake he would automatically get the food. Later the rake was separated from the food and the animal had to learn how to grasp the rake at the right end and "hook" the food for himself.

When the food was placed out of reach of the rake, the monkeys learned how to use the short rake to get a longer one and in turn to "hook" the food. This process was repeated until finally some of the more intelligent animals were using eight rakes placed at different distances from the cage to get the food.

The ability to use tools has in the past been thought to be exclusively a characteristic of man and the higher primates, such as gorillas, chimpanzees, and orangutans. This experiment definitely shows that the use of tools originated long before even the chimpanzee evolved.

Treacherous Stairways

Stairways can be treacherous danger spots if not planned on a proper scale. Twenty-three per cent of all home accidents occur on stairways and steps, according to the National Safety Council's annual statistical report. Where there is a corner in the stairway, safety can be maintained if no more than two steps are set in a 90 degree turn, and these allow for ample foot space. To divide the turn into three steps makes for unsafe footing and constitutes a safety hazard. In modernizing older homes, unsafe stairways should be neither replaced nor redesigned. Care should be exercised to assure that the new stairway is easy to ascend and descend and that curves and corners have sufficient foot space.

The production of pigiron in Italy increased from 521,444 tons in 1934 to 862,829 tons in 1938. Production of steel jumped from 1,849,821 tons in 1934 to 2,322,856 tons in 1938.

Ernest Brinkert Slain

White Plains, N. Y., Dec. 15 (AP)—Ernest Brinkert, 36, who was picked up as a suspicious character during the Lindbergh kidnaping investigation, was slain today as a result of what police said was a petty quarrel. District Attorney Walter Ferris of Westchester county said Brinkert, who had assumed the name of Ernest Brennan after he gained notoriety in 1932, was shot to death in an argument over a debt. The shooting occurred in his home, and the alleged slayer, James Johnston, 43, a painter of Bedford village, was arrested in New York as he tried to board a subway train at 242d street and Van Cortland Park.

No Cause Verdict Returned in Case

Verdicts of no cause of action were returned in the five insurance actions brought by Joseph F. Saccoman, as administrator, etc., of the estate of Helen Saccoman, his wife, who died May 19, 1937. The actions were brought against the Prudential Insurance Company to recover under five small policies which had been taken out less than a year prior to her death.

The company defended the actions on the grounds that the policies had not been in effect a year and that her condition must have been known at the time the policies were taken out and therefore the information contained on the applications was not correct. Flanagan & Kaercher appeared for the plaintiff. A. J. Cook and Francis T. Murray appeared for the defendant.

The verdicts were returned late Thursday afternoon and Justice Bergan excused jurors until Monday at 10 o'clock, to which time court recessed.

Ship May Be Decoy

Vera Cruz, Mexico, Dec. 15 (AP)—Speculation arose today that Germany's third largest merchant ship, the 32,581-ton liner Columbus, was being used to lure British warships into a battle trap. Foreign sources said the big passenger ship, painted battleship gray and carrying provisions and fuel for a 50-day voyage, sailed from Vera Cruz yesterday as bait for British war vessels, as a supply ship for Nazi men-o'-war or to make a bold dash for home.

The meeting will start with dinner at 6:30.

Japanese Language Characters

Only 3,000 characters are needed to express every-day thoughts in good Japanese, says Professor Onishi, of Hosei university. He asserts that 80,000 characters are in everyday use, but that in 92 per cent of the cases 3,000 different ones practically cover the field. He has written a dictionary of these characters, which he hopes will supersede all similar lexicons. He holds that the 1,859 ideograph list compiled by the Education Ministry of Tokyo is too short, while half the 7,000 characters usually found in ordinary printing shops are practically unused. It is his idea that the type in use can be reduced to 3,000 and that the saving in labor and expense will be enormous.

THIS IS THE LIMIT FOR GERMANS, TOO

This official French army photograph shows the barbed wire and sandbag barricade which the French have thrown up on their end of the bridge connecting the French city of Strasbourg and the German town of Kehl, across the Rhine river from each other on the Franco-German battle front. The sign says: "Advice to tourists, this is the limit for those without passports." If and when real fighting breaks out on the Rhine river front, the French will try to make it the limit for Germans, too.
